

SALVAGE SAFES FROM WRECKS OF BUILDINGS

DIVER CHARLES GUNDERSON HAS TROUBLE WORKING IN THE SWIFT CURRENT IN RIVER AT PRESENT TIME.

WILL REPAIR BRIDGE

Two Strong Boxes Were Recovered Up to This Afternoon and Search is Being Made for Third—May Delay Work.

Two safes have already been removed from the wreckage of the ruined building on the Milwaukee street bridge, the Brown Bros. safe on Thursday and Archie Reid's big safe this morning. This afternoon a force of men are at work clearing the wreckage from the top of the Carpenter and Carpenter safe and as soon as this is done diver Gunderson will go down and attach chains around it so it can be hauled up to the bridge. Work of clearing away the wreckage by the city was finished this morning. A channel was opened through the center of the mass to relieve the overflow and the water is rushing down like a mill race. When the water is lower, some time next week, work will resume of clearing out the channel meanwhile unless there is some unforeseen flood no further work will be done at present.

View of Wreckage Where Diver is Working.

Charles Gunderson, the diver from Chicago, whom the Commercial club has employed to salvage the safes in the river, spent several hours below the surface Friday afternoon saving timbers away from the Reid safe wreckage. It was not until this morning that they were able to pull it to the surface. It was found in a little pocket barely large enough for the diver to work in.

A large derrick, belonging to John Cullen, the contractor who had his men at work clearing away the wreckage, was utilized to haul the safe up and the same derrick is being utilized this afternoon by the workmen from the construction gang employed by the White Construction company on the new railroad bridge, who are clearing the wreckage away under the direction of William Burgett, who has volunteered his service to aid in the clearing away the debris.

The Reid safe was found in much the same condition as the Brown Bros. and had to be pried open. The money was all right but the papers and books were badly damaged by water. The crew of bridge men, who are experienced in the work of wreckage, employed are Benjamin Morris, James Goggin, William Schoor, Elliot Sinkows and S. R. Mathews. These men Mr. Burgett has loaned from his bridge and assist in the work of salvage.

The Reid safe had about two hundred dollars in cash in it. The swift current which is running under the wreckage makes it difficult to work and diver Gunderson insisted that all danger from becoming entangled in wires and irons be removed before he undertakes his work of securing chains around the Carpenter and Carpenter safe.

As to the Rehberg safe it may be necessary to build a temporary coffer dam around it before undertaking to raise it, unless the river should go down materially as it would be extremely dangerous to work in the swift current without some sort of protection. Secretary Lane of the Commercial club is seeking for some means to protect Gunderson and it is possible he will make the attempt Sunday morning as he has other engagements on Monday that compel him to abandon his work here for the present.

According to an agreement with the interurban company, Janesville will furnish the labor, the bolts, and other incidentals needed for making a temporary Milwaukee Street bridge if the Rockford & Interurban railway will furnish the timbers, machinery and oversight. It will also give the use of all materials that can be salvaged from the old bridge. This substance is the proposition made by the city to the interurban company and the one that was accepted at a conference between their representatives this afternoon.

The interurban company had agreed to build the bridge provided that the city will supply all new timbers necessary to support the roadway and walks but the city officers did not want to make any considerable expenditure of this kind, for the materials will be of little or no value to them once the temporary bridge is removed.

About one hundred feet of the old bridge was practically destroyed and it is a question whether it is safe even for foot-passengers at the present time. It is assuredly unsafe for teaming and street cars. The proposed temporary bridge will have to be in use for several months while the permanent bridge is being constructed. It is to carry light traffic and street cars, and have one walk but it is not intended to bear any heavy traffic.

Mayor Fathers announced that the interurban company had accepted the proposition offered by the city, that traffic over the bridge would be suspended until repairs had been made, and work would begin at once and be rushed to a conclusion. It is expected to have the temporary bridge ready in a week's time.

DIVES HEAD FIRST FROM PRISON ROOF

Famous French Criminal Escapes From Cell and Commits Suicide When Cornered.

Paris, April 5.—An anarchist and bandit Lacombe, called by the French police the most desperate criminal in Europe, committed suicide today in the prison Delasante, where he awaited trial for the murder of M. Duret, editor of the newspaper "L'Ides Libres."

Lacombe was arrested in Paris on March 11th, after the police had sought him for several months. When taken in custody he was carrying in his pocket a small dynamite box, two dynamite cartridges, two automatic pistols, and a supply of ammunition. A mob tried to lynch him while on his way to the police station.

During his captivity Lacombe confessed to the murder of Duret and admitted also killing postmaster at Bexons and a railway cashier at Les Aubrais near Orleans.

Lacombe in some unknown manner escaped from his prison cell after breakfast this morning. When the warden discovered he was gone from his cell there was considerable commotion. The interior of the prison was searched and the alarm given out side. The whole neighborhood of the jail was patrolled for several hours by soldiers.

Some time afterwards Lacombe was found on the roof of the prison lying behind a chimney. When he saw his pursuers he stuck to the edge of the roof until surrounded on two sides by armed wardens and he turned around saluted the wardens, smiled ironically and then jumped head first like a diver into the court three stories below where he was dashed to death.

To Open Irrigation Canal. Stockton, Cal., April 5.—Arrangements have been made for a celebration tomorrow when the first water is turned into the South San Joaquin irrigation district. The district comprises 72,000 acres of South San Joaquin land.

WASHINGTON AGOG WITH SOCIETY WAR

Campaign Against Wine at Society Functions Stirrs Up Feeling—First Formal Breakfast Today.

Washington, April 5.—Society women of Washington to the number of 350 today welcomed at a formal breakfast the wives of President Wilson, Vice-President Marshall, and members of President Wilson's cabinet. The elimination of wine from the menu was the result of a campaign which has caused feeling to run high. A number of women members of the Christian Temperance Union who occupied one of the tables were active in the campaign. Although 350 women were invited to the breakfast at least that many more were not invited and were in rather unpleasant frame of mind today.

Another marked feature was the total absence of speeches. Not even an address of welcome to Mrs. Wilson was on the program. Instead there was an illustrated lecture by Mrs. Abbey Gunn Baker.

DISCHARGE HAYWOOD AFTER HIS HEARING

I. W. W. Organizer Gets Liberty After Arrest on Charge of Disorderly Conduct During Silk Strike.

Paterson, N. J., April 5.—William D. Haywood, organizer of the Industrial Workers of the World was discharged from custody today after a hearing of charge of disorderly conduct, and causing unlawful assemblage in connection with the silk mill workers' strike.

Adolph Lessig, arrested with Haywood, was also discharged. The court held that no intent to commit crime had been shown. Amid scenes of riotous demonstration on the part of several thousands of strikers the two men were escorted to a hall for a mass meeting.

CLAIMS RHEUMATISM IS A GERM DISEASE

Dr. Edward C. Roshnow of Rush Medical College Announces Discovery of New Bacteria.

Chicago, April 5.—Rheumatism is carried by a germ was announced last night by Dr. Edward C. Roshnow of the Rush Medical College who also asserted that he has discovered the identity of the hitherto unknown bacteria.

Dr. Roshnow made known his discovery for the first time to the staff of the Chicago Tuberculosis Institute to whom he was reviewing his research work. He said it has been carried on through experiments with rabbits into which he injected the rheumatic germs taken from a human being. Dr. Roshnow found the tonsils of the patients were inflamed and he injected bacteria from inflamed tonsils into rabbits and the identical symptoms developed. It is believed the germ secures its food and lodges in the tonsils. Dr. Roshnow's discovery will be the basis for experimental work in that search for a cure for rheumatism.

TWO MEN ARE KILLED IN B. AND O. WRECK

Passenger Train Tears Through Open Switch at Ohio Town Last Night.

North Baltimore, Ohio, April 5.—Two men were killed and four scalded and two others slightly injured in a wreck last night on the Baltimore & Ohio Ry., when passenger train No. 6 ran through an open switch at 11:30 P. M., at Hoytville, four miles west of here. The engine torn loose from the rest of the train crashed through the depot at Hoytville.

The dead are: Eireman Jackson, Garrett, Ind.; Grant Mason, Hoytville. The scalded are: Engineer Burton Koff, Garrett; Claude Hogo, T. C. Miller and W. Miller of Hoytville. Five injured passengers whose names were not learned were taken to the company's hospital at Garrett, Ind.

CONFERENCE OF LATTER DAY SAINTS HELD IN LAMONI

Lamoni, La., April 5.—Delegates are arriving in large number for the annual conference of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, which will be opened here tomorrow with President Joseph Smith, of Independence, Mo., presiding. The conference will be in session for probably ten days, and will dispose of a large amount of routine business. The business is always transacted at the afternoon session and morning and evening sessions being devoted to religious services.

The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints claims to be the church in succession to the one founded by Joseph Smith in 1830. Its membership now numbers about 65,000. The general headquarters are in Lamoni.

THREE BURNED TO DEATH IN PITTSBURGH EXPLOSION

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 5.—Three men were burned to death and two others fatally injured today in an explosion at the Homestead Works of the United States Steel Corporation.

PREPARE TO RESUME WORK IN CONGRESS; RUSH TARIFF WORK

Congressmen Get Back to Washington for Special Session Which Opens Monday.

Washington, April 5.—Members of congress returned to Washington today in large numbers for the opening of the special session of the new congress Monday noon. Republican members of the house had been advised to reach the city to participate in a party caucus tonight at which it is expected Representative Mann of Illinois will again be named for party leader in the house.

Activity at both the house and senate ends of the capitol centers now about the preparation for tariff revision work. Senator John W. Kern, call the democratic leader of the senate, will next week to consider proposed changes in the rules to distribute more thoroughly the control of committees and legislation.

The date of the democratic house caucus to pass upon the details of the tariff revision bill has not been determined upon early today. Hundreds of minor appointments are expected to reach the senate Monday when that body convenes. President Wilson has announced only a few recess appointments since the senate adjourned in March, but it is understood that scores of routine appointments have been determined upon and will be sent to the senate early in the week.

To Senate Committee. The new tariff bill underwent a careful examination today at the hands of members of the senate finance committee. Although the anti-free sugar forces from Louisiana and other cane and beet sugar states were making an effort to rally enough strength to defeat President Wilson's compromise plan the senate leaders were analyzing all contested parts of the bill, the purpose being to tell President Wilson tomorrow whether the leaders can accept the bill without change.

The action of Chairman Underwood of the ways and means committee in turning the committee's bill over to the senate for examination, is almost unprecedented in tariff history. It is believed that the senate leaders insisted they should be consulted in preparation of the tariff revision and President Wilson has made efforts to bring the senate, house and White House into accord on the bill before the measure is introduced.

Agree With Wilson. The democratic majority of the ways and means committee voted unanimously today to agree to President Wilson's tariff decision as to the sugar schedule, and adjourned until Monday. The majority will agree either to free sugar or a low duty to be eliminated entirely in three years. President Wilson is expected to make his decision today.

'APPLE DAY' CELEBRATED THROUGHOUT WASHINGTON

Spokane, Wash., April 5.—Reports received by the Chamber of Commerce of this city indicate a wide observance of 'Apple Day' throughout the State yesterday today. The celebration has been made an annual fixture as a means of calling public attention to the greatest of orchard products in the Pacific Northwest. Through the activities of the commercial clubs, hotels and dining cars featured the apple on their menus today, while the 'king of fruits' in the form of apple sauces, apple pies or baked apples, graced the dining tables in practically every home in the state.

Thoughtful Buying Will Lower Your Cost of Living.

(By J. P. Fulton.)

It has been laid down as economic law that lowered cost gained through simple change in supplying your wants carries with it no loss of pleasure in consumption.

This means you can often-times lower your cost of living by thoughtful buying for example: Mercerized silk serves the purpose of its users and gives as much pleasure as the more expensive kinds. A sewing machine stripped of its nickel plate and artistic finish (but with the same mechanism) costs less than the original article. A coat lined with cambric costs less than one lined with high grade silk, yet the wear is practically the same.

You should think not only of what can be saved as between different articles and their uses, but as between different stores and buying seasons as well. Read the advertisements in THE GAZETTE closely and constantly every day and they will help you keep your cost of living down to a minimum. They will direct you to the right store at the right time.

BREAKS IN LEVEES CAUSE OHIO RIVER TO RAPIDLY REcede

Cut Embankments Near St. Louis to Allow Flood Waters to Drain Off on Submerged Farm Lands.

Cairo, Ill., April 5.—For the first time since the Ohio river started to rise two weeks ago a decided recession of the water and a decided mark, which had been passed early last night.

The fall here was believed to have been caused by a break in the levee at Port Pleasant, Mo. It was thought the San Francisco bottoms were being flooded. If this were the case all danger to Cairo would be at an end. A relief expedition was sent today to Mound City, Illinois. The conditions there are said to be strenuous. The sun was bright and warm here today.

Cut Embankments. New Madrid, Mo., April 5.—St. Louis and San Francisco embankments between Libourne and Kewanee in the extreme southeastern part of Missouri was cut early today to allow the flood waters to drain off of submerged farm lands. The line was cut at the direction of the railway officials to prevent the flooding of a large section of the track should the levee break at a weak spot. The gap in the railroad is about 20 feet wide and permitted the drainage of a large volume of overflow from the Mississippi. The levee at Point Pleasant, Mo., is still intact.

Rise at Dekoven. Dekoven, Ky., April 5.—The Ohio river has risen only one-tenth of an inch since yesterday morning. It is believed the worst of the flood is over, as only slight rises are reported from Evansville, Ind., and Shawneetown, Ill. No rain has fallen for 24 hours.

WOMEN FIRE FIENDS CAUGHT RED HANDED

Two Suffragettes Captured in London This Morning Just As They Set Fire to Race Course.

London, April 5.—Two suffragette "fire fiends" were captured this morning red-handed, while setting fire to the new grandstand at the Kelso race course in Scotland. Rags saturated with petroleum had been placed around the stand and ignited when the women sprang out of a hiding place and captured the two women. The grandstand on the race course, also in Scotland, was gutted by fire this morning, causing a loss of $15,000. Several suffragette placards and a bundle of suffrage literature were found in the vicinity, leaving no doubt in the minds of the authorities as to who was responsible for the fire.

A large number of window-breaking and telegraph wire cutting outrages were committed during the night by militants in various parts of the country. The bomb and arson campaign threatened by the "wild women" has caused intense alarm in the provinces, especially at historic places like Chataworth and Blenheim, where special patrols of police and gatekeepers have been placed on duty day and night.

ONE POWER REFUSES CHINA RECOGNITION

Washington, April 5.—At least one great power has already declined to join the United States in recognizing the new Chinese republic at this stage and there is reason to expect some of the other powers to take a similar attitude. No protest has been lodged against the course to be taken by the United States but there exists at some foreign capitals so much doubt as to the success that will follow the attempts of the constituent assembly to organize a complete and stable government on April 8th, that some of the powers deem it prudent to withhold formal recognition for the present at least.

BOTH FEET FROZEN BEFORE HIS DEATH

London, Eng., April 5.—Captain Lawrence Oates of the Enniskillen dragoons, who died with Captain Robert Scott on his ill-fated Antarctic expedition had lost both of his feet from frost bites before he stumbled out of the tent to his death on the stumps of his legs according to a letter to Captain Watson, the agent of the Imperial Service Guild at Wellington, New Zealand. Watson says he makes the revelation on the authority of Commander Evans. Previous reports of his condition told only half the truth writes Captain Watson.

THREATEN TO MOVE FACTORY TO EUROPE

Auburn, N. Y., April 5.—Unless the strike rioting here ceases at once and a settlement between the strikers and their employers is requested, the International Harvester Company will remove their entire plant, one of the largest of the kind in the world, to Europe where they say labor conditions are more stable.

MEASURES REGARDING COMMISSION SYSTEM

Publication of Proceedings in Newspapers Favored by Committee—County Plan Unrecommended.

Madison, Wis., April 5.—Several bills amending the commission form of government for cities law have been recommended for passage by the committee on municipalities. The bills requiring the publication of council proceedings in newspapers, instead of in the pamphlet form was favored as was the Gannon bill permitting one of the commissioners to be designated as acting mayor and further providing that two members of the council shall be a quorum to transact business.

County Commission. The two bills for the abolition of the present county board systems and the substitution of a commission form of government for counties have been reported to the house by the committee on state affairs without recommendation. The Peavey bill provides for the abolition of the county board system, but the Judson Hall bill would leave it for the counties to decide whether they desired to adopt the new form of government. The state affairs committee could come to no agreement on the bills.

Village Proceedings. Senator Hoyt has introduced a bill requiring that the official proceedings of village boards, together with every order, by-law, or resolution required by law, shall be published within two weeks after the meeting in some newspaper. In the county Preference shall be given to newspapers having the largest circulation within the village.

GANGSTERS MURDER A TAMMANY LEADER

Eugene Smith, Said to Have Been Involved in Gang Feud, Shot And Killed by Four Enemies.

New York, April 5.—Eugene Smith, a Tammany political leader was shot and killed on Court Row early today by four gangsters while on his way home from a ball at one of the east side democratic organizations at Tammany Hall. The gangsters, who were seen only by one witness, escaped. A brother of the slain man said Smith was mistaken for someone else. But the police were told that Smith has recently become involved in a gang feud and had moved to Brooklyn because of threats on his life.

ADVALOREM PLAN IS SLATED FOR DEATH

New Taxation System for Phone Companies Unanimously Shelved by Committee.

Madison, Wis., April 5.—The joint finance committee of the legislature and the assembly committee on transportation of the assembly have recommended for indefinite postponement the Howe bill providing for the ad valorem taxation of telephone companies in the state. A similar bill introduced by Senator Teasdale has been killed already in the senate. At the hearing yesterday afternoon no one appeared in favor or against the measure. The report of the committee was unanimous. It was understood that the members of the tax commission were not in favor of the enactment of the law at the present time.

Steel Mail Cars. Hearings were held by the transportation committee on the Mahon bill requiring the use of steel cars for the carrying of mail. Henry Killilea and several other railroad attorneys appeared in opposition to the bill. They claimed that the federal government made explicit contracts with the railroads as to how the mail shall be carried, even designating the kind of cars that are to be used. They further claimed that under a law of congress all wooden cars for the use of the railway postoffice service will be relegated by July 1, 1917, and that the states could not legislate on the subject. Assemblyman Mahon claimed that some of the worst wrecks in the state had resulted in the use of wooden cars for the carrying of mail.

Locomotive Inspection. Railroad attorneys and employees joined in asking for the passage of the Manning bill, which provides for inspection of railroad locomotives by the state. The bill introduced by Assemblyman Holmes by request requiring the use of a standard caboose, was opposed by the railroad attorneys. They favored an amendment to the present bill which would vest the power of regulating the size of cabooses with the railroad commission.

AVALANCHE IN ALPS IMPRISON WORKMEN

Grave Fears Entertained for Safety of Two Hundred Workmen Caught Under Landslide. Rome, Italy, April 5.—Two hundred laborers and engineers working on the Furka pass across the Alps were blockaded yesterday by the fall of an avalanche near Domodossola. Some of them have already died from exposure. Grave anxiety is felt as to the remainder. A spell of cold weather set in today throughout Italy. Snow fell during the night on Vesuvius.

PROSPECTS OF PEACE BRIGHT IN BALKANS

POWERS TAKE CHARGE OF SITUATION AND OUTLINE SUGGESTIONS FOR SETTLEMENT.

ALLIES ASK CHANGES

Balkan Nations Reply With Request For Further Concessions Which Are Granted By Powers.

Sofia, April 5.—The prospects for peace in the Balkans looked very bright today although the allies in their reply to the mediation suggestions of the powers demanded numerous and radical changes the powers promptly replied with concessions, designed to bring a prompt cessation of hostilities.

In a note presented to the Bulgarian government today the powers proposed that the Thracian frontier should be formed by a line from Midkhan the Black Sea to Enos on the Aegean sea. This would give Bulgaria both banks of the river Maritza in accordance with her demands.

It is also suggested that all financial questions such as indemnity should be left to the decision of a technical commission to meet in Paris.

Proposition of Powers.

The proposition of the powers were as follows:

1. The frontier of Turkey shall start at Enos and end at Midkhan. All territory west of this line shall go to the allied states with the exception of Albania, the cession of which shall be fixed by the powers.
2. The question of the Aegean islands shall be settled by the powers.
3. Turkey shall abandon all claims to Crete.
4. The powers cannot favorably entertain the demands for indemnity.
5. As soon as these bases are accepted hostilities shall cease.

Reply of Allies.

The reply of the Balkan allies contain the following counter propositions:

1. In the definite determination of the frontier of the province of Thracian line indicated by the conditions formulated by the powers shall be taken as a basis and not as a definite line.
2. The islands in the Aegean sea shall go to the Balkan allies.
3. The allies consider they should know before hand the frontier proposal for the future state of Albania trusting they will be in conformity with those they proposed in London.
4. The allies demand for a war indemnity must be accepted in principle.

Blockade of Harbor.

Cettinje, Montenegro, April 5.—The blockade of the Montenegrin harbor of Antivari was definitely begun today. Eight foreign warships representing the European powers formed a semi-circular bar before the harbor. The fleet is composed of three Austrian, two Italian, one British, one German and one French warship. Scutari, Montenegro.

Belgrade, Serbia, April 5.—No confirmation has been received here of the rumor that the Turkish overtures of Soutar has failed. The Montenegrans and Serbian besiegers. The allied armies outside the city summoned the Turkish commander to surrender so as to avoid further useless bloodshed, but the Ottoman leader replied that he intended to fight to the last extremity. The bombardment were thereupon opened and a general assault by the Montenegrans and Serbian troops was ordered.

The allied demand for a war indemnity must be accepted in principle, the task of fixing the amount being left to a commission which is to study financial questions and on which the Balkan allies will be represented. The allies agree that the operations of war shall cease as soon as the above conditions have been favorably received.

PEACE PROCESSION FOLLOWS VIOLENCE

Zion City Presents Unusual Appearance Today Following Riots of Yesterday.

Zion City, Ill., April 5.—In contrast with the scenes of violence when the Zion City crusader several days ago attempted to hold street meetings to protest against persons using tobacco and were dispersed by the city marshal and his deputies with drawn clubs, the followers of Wilbur Voliva engaged today in peaceful maneuvers with the authorities, to the amusement of the spectators. Defying an ordinance which forbade street processions and the holding of street meetings several hundred crusaders today assembled at the Zion administration building, and forming three separate columns started to march and counter-march in different directions singing "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

Marshal Hoover and six assistants worked unsuccessfully for several hours to disperse the band, but there was no violence and no arrests. As soon as the marshal disbanded one parade another was on the scene. This continued until the crusaders were weary and voluntarily returned to their quarters.

CHINESE SOLDIERS MEET LARGE BAND OF PIRATES

Hong Kong, China, April 5.—After a bitter fight with a band of pirates on the West river today a force of Chinese soldiers shot one and captured six pirates. Three of the men died. More than $150,000 in loot was recovered.

OPPORTUNITY OFFERED TO MAKE ROCK COUNTY BANNER CORN COUNTY

EVERY FARMER'S BOYS UNDER SIXTEEN HAS OPPORTUNITY TO ENTER GAZETTE CORN GROWING CONTEST.

N. RAESSLER IN CHARGE

Rare Chance to Secure Valuable Prizes. As Well As Excellent Corn for Future Plantings of Known Qualities.

On another page of the Gazette of today's issue, will be found the announcement of the Boy's Corn Contest, open to every boy in Rock county, sixteen years of age and under, who will comply with the requirements, purchase his dollar's worth of seed corn furnished by the Gazette, and plant one acre of land. Boys are at liberty to furnish their own seed provided they use either Silver King or Golden Glow.

It is a rare opportunity as the prizes offered for the best ten crops, are well worth trying for. Fifty dollars is to

"BROADWAY JONES" IS TYPICAL COHAN PLAY

Clever. Farce Comedy Delights Audience at the Myers Theatre Friday Evening.

"Broadway" Jones, George Cohan's latest offering to the public, which appeared at the Myers theatre Friday evening, is a typical Cohan production. True it does not have the characteristic of Cohan's musical attempts. It does not have the catchy songs of "Little Johnny Jones" or the "So Long Mary" air of "Forty Five Minutes From Broadway." It is not a musical pot pourri, with catchy songs, pretty girls and clever dancing, but a farce comedy harking back to the days when George Cohan and his father, mother and sister, appeared as the Four Cohans, on the vaudeville stage and presented their skit, "The Governor's Son," written by George himself.

In those days George Cohan wrote all the playlettes he and his family be awarded for the best crop, $35.00 for the second best, $25.00 for the third, $15 for the fourth, and $10.00 for the fifth; and then there are ten $5.00 prizes for the next five best crops.

In order to assure the success of this contest, the Gazette has made arrangements with Mr. Noyes R. Raessler, the champion corn-grower of Wisconsin, and secretary of the Rock County Experimental association, not only to furnish the seed corn, his famous Silver King variety, which is thoroughly tested and ready for planting, but also to take charge of the contest itself.

This in itself is worth more than the prizes offered to every contestant. Mr. Raessler has a world-wide reputation as a corn-grower. Not only will he personally inspect each acre of ground entered in the contest, but he will give suggestions as to its cultivation, personally, and also through a series of articles which will be published only in the Gazette.

On Mr. Raessler's farm this Silver King variety has been grown, under careful cultivation, so that the yield from three acres was 306 bushels—over a hundred bushels per acre. He is certain that even under ordinary conditions and care the corn will show sixty to seventy-five bushels per acre, and when the contest is over to consider that from one bushel of seed corn some seven to eight acres can be planted, from the yield of the one acre planted this year, it is easy to figure out how, within a year's time, this variety of tested corn, suitable for this climate, can be made to furnish seed for the entire county, and plenty left over for a second planting if necessary.

Mr. Raessler has demonstrated that the finest corn in the country can be grown right here in Rock county, and if this be true then Rock county should be the banner corn county of Wisconsin. Now is the opportunity to make the start in this direction. All it needs is the entrance of the competitor, one acre of land, and following the instructions which Mr. Raessler will issue.

The contestants try not only for the prizes offered, but also will have the yield of corn to pay them for their labor. It will be a big satisfaction to the winners to realize they have been successful in growing corn that is worthy of a blue ribbon. There will be no guess work about the decision as to the winners, and the judging will be done by experts who will be employed for this work.

The Gazette wants Rock county to forge ahead as a corn-growing district. It offers this opportunity to make the nucleus of the work for future years and the proposition offered to every boy in the county, is worth careful consideration.

Now is the time to take the matter up and delays mean that the contestants who enter first will have their ground ready and perhaps have a slight advantage. The entries close May 5th for entrance, and then the fun will begin.

for advertising, that by the way is his business when he is not flying around with "Broadway," that will put Jones Gum in everyone's mouth the country over and the play ends with every one happy and the Jones Gum assured a bright future.

Cohan loses no opportunity to create a laugh. Morgan as "Broadway" had little eccentricities that kept the audience in an uproar and as the play centers about him, his clever mannerism, his little caught, his asides and love for Mrs. Spotswood's lemonade "with a stick in it" but "for the Lord's sake do not tell the Judge," all creates laughs at just the proper time. Taking it all in all "Broadway" Jones is a most pleasing comedy and well produced.

DEMAND FOR HOGS IS MORE PROMISING

Prices Have Five Cent Advance This Morning—Sheep Market Is Strong.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

ELGIN BUTTER IS FIRM AT THIRTY-FIVE CENTS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Elgin, Ill., March 31.—Elgin butter firm at 35 cents.

OBITUARY.

Edward Blow.
Edward Blow, who has been ill for the last two years with a lingering illness, much of that time confined to his bed, died at five o'clock yesterday afternoon at his home on Madison street. He was born in Janesville and has lived here all his life. Surviving him are his wife, who before her marriage to him in 1905, was Miss Clara Bowles of La Crosse, his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. William Blow of this city, two sisters, Stella of Milwaukee and Esther of this city, and one brother, Charles Blow, also of Janesville. Edward Blow showed great patience and fortitude during his weary months of suffering, was considerate of those who attended him, and cheerful to the last.

Requiem mass will be celebrated at St. Mary's church at nine o'clock Monday morning.

John Grant.
John Grant, a resident of Janesville for many years, died early this afternoon after a lingering illness with cancer. He was born Nov. 4, 1847, in Albany, New York, and came to this city with his parents at an early age. He leaves to mourn his loss, a daughter, Mrs. Charles Kneff, a granddaughter, Miss Louise Kneff, two nieces, Mrs. Lawson and Mrs. Leroy Sheffield, and a nephew, John Clough. Notice of funeral will be given later.

DEMAND REPEALING OF ENGLISH LAWS AGAINST BLASPHEMY

Concerted Movement For Purpose Is Begun—"Titanic" Damage. Suit Cases are Brought Into Court.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, April.—Recent prosecutions under the existing English laws against blasphemy have resulted in a concerted movement for their repeal on the ground that they are archaic and unfair.

A meeting to this end was held a few days ago in Essex Hall, the traditional home of religious freedom in England, which was the scene of a similar meeting in 1824. It was attended by many clergymen and prominent secularists, who all joined in denouncing the laws and demanding their abolition. A resolution was then passed, asserting that they were "ferocious" and "inhuman," and an "infraction" of the great principles of civil and religious liberty.

Copeland, Bowie, who declared he spoke as a sincere friend of religion, denounced the existing anti-blasphemy statutes because of the unjust discrimination in their enforcement. He said that if, in the case of an Oxford College, a distinguished member of Parliament, or an eminent literary man, cared to blaspheme, he learned and forcible language, there was little chance of his being prosecuted and imprisoned, but if a workingman at the street corner or in a public park gave expression to the same ideas in crude or foolish language, he was haled before a court, and frequently sentenced to a considerable term of imprisonment.

A number of cases for damages arising out of the sinking a year ago of the "Titanic" are to be brought in the English courts by relatives of passengers who lost their lives in that disaster.

The amounts claimed will be nothing like those which the American courts will be called upon to deal with. There is no way, however, of estimating them accurately because, in England, unlike America, few of the claimants mention any specific sum, leaving it to the courts to award what they think proper. Among those who will take action in England are relatives of Russians and Scandinavians who went down in the ship.

A few test cases will be heard first in order to arrive at a basis for the subsequent trials. Ordinarily the law limits the amount claimable to $75 per ton of the ship's gross tonnage. Should this apply to the case of the "Titanic" the total liability of the White Star Company would not exceed $3,500,000. The attorneys for the claimants will contend that this law does not apply in this case.

The university man in business is becoming a burning subject in England, but several of the magnates of commerce who have interested themselves in the movement are somewhat discouraged by the lack of response from those on whose belief they are working. These magnates state that while business needs the university man, it can continue to get along much better without him than he can without it.

In spite of the attractions of the military service, the church and the law for English university graduates, some of them have expressed themselves in favor of business careers. If they can start in at or near the top, One Cambridge A. B. suggested in the most inebriated manner that he would be quite willing to go into commerce if he could secure a tutor who would teach him the business so well that he could immediately take a directing share in it. None of the ambitious seekers after business careers have shown any desire to enter it by the basement door.

Because the lace industry of England has not been given tariff protection, a prominent manufacturer of Nottingham has carried out his threat and moved to the town of Raab, in Hungary. While it is not at all likely that all the lace makers will follow him, he will seek foreign tariff protection, the first step in this direction has caused much uneasiness and considerable speculation as to the future on the part of the workers.

The Hungarian government offered the English manufacturer very liberal inducements. He is given a free site for his factory on the banks of the Danube, freedom from local taxation for ten years, and Imperial taxation for fifteen years, and a cash grant of $17,000. The stipulation is that, after the lapse of a reasonable time, native labor shall be employed.

The lace makers of Nottingham have long claimed that their industry would be killed unless a tariff was established to give them some protection from foreign competitors.

One of the principal features of the new Education Bill to be introduced during the present session of Parliament, it is understood, will be the establishment by local authorities of evening schools throughout the country and the compulsory attendance of children under sixteen years of age. The school age for the present day schools also will be raised to fourteen years, so that for two years after leaving day school children will have the advantage of lessons in the evening.

To meet the objection that boys and girls at work during the day would be too tired to attend evening schools, the bill will limit the employment of young persons to probably 36 hours a week.

Sudden strikes, put into effect without warning and at a time selected by the employer as much embarrassing as possible, are becoming a feature in England and their notable success is leading to a widespread recognition of their efficacy.

In no less than five cases recently the workers have laid down their tools at the moment their services were most urgently needed. Four of these strikes occurred in restaurants and hotels where the principles of the Syndicalists have made the greatest headway. "Down places" was the

GINK AND DINK.

Sport Snap Shots

by Dad McCarty

Pop Warner, for many years coach of the Carlisle Indian teams, is said to have made one of his big baseball successes by a clever ruse. Being possessed of one Indian, who could field like a house afire, but who couldn't bat worth a whoop and of another Indian, exactly like the first in general appearance, who could wallopp the ball for keeps and field pretty well, the batting redskins used to be sent to bat both for himself and for the weak batter. The latter never went to bat at all in a game while the latter would amble to the plate seven or eight times and paste the pellet for a .500 average. The white men who played the redskins never knew. All Indians looked more or less alike to them.

Orvie Overall, main pitcher for the old champion Chicago Cubs, but for the last year a hold-out, has signed with the Cubs and has resumed active training. He will not join the team until some time after the season starts. He is expected to be a big help to the Cubs.

Johnny Kilbane, champion featherweight, sees ahead the possibility of making himself Johnny Kilbane, champion lightweight. It will not be long before he will find the 122-pound limit impossible. Moreover, he feels that after he has disposed of Johnny Dundee at Vernon, Cal., on April 26, as he is confident he can do there, will be no featherweight to fight him. Tom McCarey, manager of the Vernon arena, has said that he will back Kilbane for $25,000 against any lightweight in the world.

It is said that Charles Deal, recruit from the South Michigan League has won the position of regular third baseman on the Detroit Tigers. His batting has shown steady improvement and his fielding has been sensational in southern training games. This means that Oscar Vitt will probably be sent back to the minors. Vitt has suffered from stomach trouble for a couple of years and has been unable to do himself justice in baseball, although evidently having ability. For that reason, Manager Jennings will keep a good hold on him, even should he be shipped to the minors.

France intends to make a showing in the Olympic games to be held in Berlin in 1916. Training will begin shortly in the College of Athletes, which is being founded by the Marquis de Polignac, to be installed just outside Paris. All champions of France, as well as those who are able to pass the entrance tests of the college will be eligible for a free course in training at the expense of the marquis.

Coach A. Sharpe of Cornell has taken what seems to a great many people a common sense attitude on amateurism. "If a college baseball player wants to devote his summer vacation to playing ball, I can see no reason why he should not do so," he declared recently. "I can see no difference between a man using his baseball ability in vacation and going out and selling something."

read that Ban Johnson had put the finger on ball players writing baseball articles for newspapers, he let a ray out of him that could be heard across the state of Virginia. "Ball players are slaves," piped Cy, "and take it from me, there will be one grand fight some day and then we will be free to do as we please."

In several games of the season which were played away from home the team had to substitute for some regular player because of illness. FORMER CHIEF DUNN IS GIVEN HEARING BY EDGERTON BOARD

Convicted by Fire and Police Commission Today of Illegally Levying a Fine Against An Arrest.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Edgerton, April 5.—At an examination of former Chief of Police Charles Dunn which was held before the Fire and Police Commission of this city in the council chambers this morning it was found that Dunn unlawfully collected $14 as a fine from a man arrested by him on the charge of drunkenness, and as a penalty the commission ordered that he forfeit ten days' pay. Dunn, however, handed his resignation to the council on April 3, and is no longer connected with the Edgerton police department. He took this step voluntarily evidently anticipating that the commission would request his resignation following today's hearing. Night Watchman Ben Springer is now acting chief.

At the hearing this morning Art Snyder and Verne Kirby were called as witnesses. The testimony showed that Snyder was arrested on the charge of drunkenness in June, 1912, and he was placed in jail and fined by Dunn the sum of $14. It was also shown that Verne Kirby, Snyder's uncle, came down from Stoughton the following day and paid $14 in addition, which payment was made in the presence of two other witnesses. It was also shown that no warrant was read to Snyder and that he did not appear for trial before any justice but was pronounced guilty by Chief Dunn. No record of the fine was ever kept and no account was made to the county treasurer or any other officer.

It is embarrassing when a young lady is in to one young gentleman and out to another, and they happen to call together.

"BOUGHT AND PAID FOR."

B. A. Worthington, president of the Chicago & Alton railroad in a talk to employees of his road, told them they could find a good lesson for their own guidance in "Bought and Paid For," the play by George Broadhurst, which comes to the Myers Theatre, Tuesday April 8, direct from its long engagement at the Princess Theatre, William A. Brady's Chicago playhouse.

"There is no sadder sight confronting an employer of men today than to see the large number of older men filling the mental positions of life," he told them. "Men who are of exemplary habits, who are honest, repectable and intelligent, and stand well in the social world, and yet who live their entire lives in mental routine places. Many are jacks of all trades but masters of none, like Jimmy Colley, one of the characters now being portrayed in "Bought and Paid For," who was always filled with self-assurance and had a world of ideas for making money, and though he stoutly insisted that he could do almost anything he could not understand why he did not rise above the position of shipping clerk. The trouble with Jimmy was that he simply learned to perform his work in a mechanical sort of way to enable him to hang on to his job, and spent the remainder of his time comparing his unfortunate fate with that of his more fortunate competitor. He never could see there was any difference between his work and that of the man at the same desk who made it his business to do such good work that he attracted the attention of his superiors. Success never just happens; there is always a reason for it. The successful man must be interested in his work."

Strenuous Competition. The grade crossing auto combination is proving almost as dangerous to life as the unloaded gun.

MARKED INCREASE SHOWN IN DEMAND FOR LABOR

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., April 5.—The demand for labor last month increased 20 per cent over March, 1912, according to the monthly report of the state industrial commission, which maintains the free employment offices in Milwaukee, Superior, Oshkosh and La Crosse. The present year promises to surpass 1912, which was an unusually active year. Calls for help in the four offices during the first three months of 1913 exceeded the first quarter of last year by 17 per cent, 10,240 men and women being called for. Over 9,000 persons were sent out to take jobs, and 5,500 were reported hired.

Wages have gone up because of the increased demand for labor and the absence of increased supply. Common laborers get 10 per cent more in Milwaukee than during 1912, while wages have gone up materially for country, street and building laborers. The Milwaukee metal trades show increases in shop forces. Foundry laborers are hard to get. The shortage of skilled men in machine shops has brought about an increase in apprentices to meet the future demand. Demands for farm help doubled in March, although it was difficult to fill calls from distant points. Farm hands report at the Milwaukee office every day seeking work.

Toward the end of March the lumber companies ceased winter operations and the workmen flocked to the cities. A great many of them went to Superior to await railroad and construction work which will begin this month.

The wood-working trades, which have been slack began to pick up in March, especially in Oshkosh. There is little activity in the shoe factories and the workers are seeking other employment.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

Dear Lord, there is so much to do in one brief busy day;
The little clothes to wash and iron and mend and put away;
The little toys to gather up, the little beds to make;
And little griefs to soothe away from little hearts that ache.
The little bodies to be kept, for Thy sake, clean and sweet,
As temples for the dwelling of the Christly spirit meet.
And Mary Mother one time knew the blessedness of this:
The little feet to wash at night, the little lips to kiss.

Forgive me, Lord, if that I seem neglectful of Thy work.
It is not that I shrink,
But that my heart and hands are full with these, my little ones,
My little daughter, fair and sweet, my sturdy little sons.
Once I rejoiced in serving Thee and only Thee all day;
And now sometimes I am so tired, I cannot even pray.
But I draw nigh at night to Him whose mother knew the bliss
Of tender little feet to wash, and little lips to kiss.

—Eather Mary Clark.

This tired mother's lament expresses the sentiment of a great army of mothers, all over the world, who are rendering the highest order of service to the Master in caring for the little flock with which she is entrusted.

The question of equal suffrage, just now commanding so much attention, does not especially interest this class of women who are fulfilling the choicest mission of womanhood.

Their names do not appear on the rolls of pedestrians, marching to the seat of government, to demand recognition; neither are they prominent in club and society circles.

The title of "Mother" dates back to the home of Isaac and Rebecca. Not a model home nor a perfect mother, for Esau was the favorite son, and his mother engineered a plan to best his brother, Jacob, out of his birthright and blessing.

The mothers of the race are not very prominent in history, before the dawn of the Christian era, but the star which guided the shepherds to the manger in Bethlehem, introduced to the world the boy Jesus, and his mother, and in the light of Christian civilization, the title has taken on new significance.

The abbreviation, "Ma," of American extraction, does not decorate the pages of sacred writ, or of any other writ, for that matter, because the writer who would use it, either in song or story, would fail to secure an audience.

The mothers and fathers live as an active force, while the "mamas and papas" cease to exist when the children are old enough to recognize the difference between a title and nickname. Teach the little folks to say "mother" and "father" in babyhood and they will respect you in later life.

There are some things which improve with age, and never wear out. One of them is the sacred name of "mother." This is as it should be, because the mother's face and gentle ministrations are the first to impress the little life which she has brought into being.

There is no sentiment about the love of a mother, and emotion does not enter into it, for it is born in sacrifice. She professes little but loves much, and the quality of a mother's love is equal to the test of every emergency.

It matters not how far the boy may drift away in paths of sin, or how wayward the girl may be. The father may be ready to cut them off, but not the mother. They are a part of her life, and she clings to them, with blind devotion.

The love of a mother is like the love of God, impartial and unselfish, yet much more tangible, because there is nothing supernatural about it. While the boy may be slow to believe that the great Creator, whom he has never seen, is interested in him, no argument is necessary to convince him that his mother loves him, and is solicitous for his welfare.

The mothers of the world are the great sheet anchors of humanity. Broader than the confines of any church or creed, they stand out as beacon lights to guide the mariner, and when the storm breaks, they are at hand to hold the little bark steady.

The church has reason to respect its mothers, for without their aid, and cheerful co-operation, there would be no church. Eighty per cent, of the recruits for all the churches last year, were under the age of eighteen, and to the mothers, more than to the Sunday schools, is due the credit.

There comes a time in the life of many mothers, when they are called upon to decide between the duties of the home, which are sometimes irksome, and the call of the church or society which is more inviting.

The day is largely past when many mothers are so much absorbed in missionary work that the home is neglected; on this account and their boys roam the streets in patched garments, while the heathen are being cared for.

But society makes many demands upon the mothers of the land of the present generation.

table and five o'clock tea, have taken the place of the missionary gatherings, to large extent.

Most men are considerate, but many of them came from homes where the old-fashioned supper hour, after the day's work was done, was anticipated with pleasure, because it was the hour of relaxation, the one hour of the day when the father, mother and children discussed the events of the day, and enjoyed together its varied experiences.

In the home of the club woman today, the maid usually presides at the evening meal. The children may be sociable, but the presence of the mother is lacking, and after a hasty repast, the father seeks congenial companionship down town while the children take to the street for amusement. It is not surprising that men sometimes take to drink, or that boys and girls drift away into the by-ways of vice.

It takes all sorts of women to make a world, and there are two or three kinds who never ought to marry, and assume the responsibility of home keepers.

One is the woman who thinks so much more of her mother than she does of her husband that she is never satisfied to leave her.

Another is the woman who is so absorbed in church work, or so fascinated by society and club life that the home is neglected.

But few mothers are enthusiastic suffragists. If they appreciate the importance of the home, and what it means to the next generation, their time and thought is fully invested in loyal and loving service.

The home is a sacred precinct, and the mission of the mother is to be the presiding genius. The call of the church may be urgent and the demands of society may be alluring, but the call of the home is imperative.

The childless home is like the shadow without substance, and no one recognizes this fact more forcefully than the man and woman who trudge along the pathway of life together, never hearing the name of father and mother, and never disturbed by the prattle of childish voices or the patter of little feet.

The golden years of life are not in the sunset period, but back in the old home where the mother's lullaby was the sweetest music, and where the boys and girls filled the house with laughter and good cheer.

If the modern home could realize that these choice environments never come to a home but once, there would be more contented mothers and happy households.

FINANCE LEADER.

With the death of J. Pierpont Morgan, the question is asked, who will be the leader in the world of finance, who will occupy the position he has so long held? The New York Wall Street Journal does not believe there will ever be a single man who will command the position that Morgan did. It looks for a change, a decided change, in the financial system of the country.

The commanding position which was occupied by Mr. Morgan in the crisis of 1907, and again in the minor crisis of 1911, when the Carnegie Trust Co. went down with its affiliated institutions, naturally raises the question who will take his place in future emergencies of this sort? There are able men in Wall Street district, some of them perhaps quite as capable of correct judgment in emergencies and the best means of remedy as Mr. Morgan himself. They have yet to win their spurs, however, as leaders in the money market. It is not merely a question of ability, but to a large degree of personality. Mr. Morgan had a personality which tended to silence jealousies and persuade others to do his will. Whether a man with just these qualities of leadership will arise at once is more than doubtful.

A dangerous weakness of the New York money market in periods of crisis is the lack of any recognized leader. This lack, indeed, is one of the reasons why, when conditions get almost beyond control, in England, France and Germany, it is the governor of the state bank who is conceded the right, by virtue of his position, to take the lead in remedial measures and in bringing together the leading private bankers to support him. Even though some of the private bankers may be able men than he, his official position puts him above petty jealousies in taking the lead. It was thus that Mr. Lidderdale, as governor of the Bank of England, formed overnight a syndicate which averted the worst consequences of the Baring failure in 1890. In New York, there is practically no one who by virtue of his position can assume such leadership. The nearest approach to it perhaps is the chairmanship of the Clearing House committee, which has been growing somewhat in recent years in dignity and influence.

"There will not be another leader exactly like Mr. Morgan. This by no means implies that there will not be men of his ability, if not of his genius, but the opportunity has been closed to some extent to a career of construction like his by the growth of the country and by recent changes in the financial mechanism. The concentration of monetary power which was the subject of attack by the Pujo committee was almost entirely personal. There must be concentration in future, but its character is likely to change from a personal to an official or semi-official authority, which everybody will recognize. The very fact that it is formal and recognized will be an advantage, because it will bring the leadership in the market out into the open, where it will be subject to fewer jealousies and misconceptions.

"In order to attain this result, however, there must be changes in our banking organization which will give concentration and with the demand for its exercise in accordance with sound and established rules."

concentration and with the demand for its exercise in accordance with sound and established rules."

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

THE PEOPLE'S PULPIT.

The country press of America is the people's pulpit.

It has more influence in shaping the thought of the nation than any other single factor.

It has more influence than the city press because of the widespread belief that the city press is controlled by special interests.

Yet the average country editor gets less return for the labor and ability expended than any other class of the population, schoolteachers and ministers of the gospel possibly excepted.

The average man does not realize how much the local paper does for the community.

It supports the moral standard of the neighborhood, its public spirit, its patriotism. It speaks for every good cause. It exposes unfaithful public servants and unfit men who are trying to enter the public service. It prints the local news and brings in the news of the outside world. It gives publicity to the schools, the churches and every local institution for betterment. If there is a town boom the newspaper is its mouthpiece and promoter. It tells of entertainments and social life. It announces births and marriages. It praises those who have gone. It is the avenue through which the merchant announces his bargains, through which those in business solicit trade. It praises improvements. It voices public opinion on questions of the day. It is one of the chief factors that make democracy and free government possible.

For all this service the editor receives a money return ludicrously small.

He has no eight hour day. It is more like a fourteen hour day and often for seven days in the week.

There are a few discriminating people who appreciate all this, but there are many others who do nothing but grumble; say they could run the paper better themselves.

It is a 100 to 1 shot that they could not.

The writer has been in the newspaper game off and on for nearly thirty years. He has covered the ground from country correspondent to Washington correspondent, from editor of a country weekly to editorial writer on a New York daily, from "type sticker" to special writer on the biggest newspaper syndicate in the land.

Throughout this experience his respect for the country editor has constantly increased until today it is his deliberate opinion that the men who run our weeklies and smaller dailies render a greater public service for a less return than any other class of men in America.

CAPUR MOMENT

From The Hickeyville Clarion.
Constable Ezra Bibbins our local sleuth, had his pocket picked the last time he was over to West Hickeyville and says he has got a good clew to the culprit who secured a nickel's worth of Mul Bar Twist, a bone collar button, the key to the Hoppertown jail and 18 cents in real money. Ike Butts is takin' the fresh air cure and is sleepin' in his corner. There ain't nothing the matter of him at present, but there probably will be if he keeps up the treatment long enough.

Mr. Eli Haskins has saved up enough soap wrappers to get a chiny closet and hopes in ten or twelve years to save up enough more to get a hand-painted pickle dish or something to put in it.

Smokin' and chewin' has been forbid at the meetin' house during services and Hank Purdy says this reform wave which is sweepin' over the country is certainly fierce and personal liberty is gettin' to be a dead letter.

Hi Huggins says he has got the rheumatiz, jumpin' pneumonia, lumbago and shingles and two of his cows has died. The mortgage has been foreclosed on his west forty, his well has gone dry, two kids have got the measles, his corn crib has burned up his oldest son is in jail and his wife has eloped with a travelin' man but outside of that he is gettin' along fair to middlin'.

Velvet From the Arabs.

In the middle ages Venice and Genoa learned the art of velvet-making from the Arabs. Toward the year 1516 Lyon inherited the business. Europe, notably France, followed the lead of the courtiers of Francis I., Louis XIV. and La Pompadour. The courts of the world wore silk, satin and velvet stiff with gold and silver embroidery. Velvet was used by the rich for hangings and for furniture cover. In Lyon, in 1900, 20,000 looms were weaving velvet.—Harper's Week.

JOHN MILTON BACK FROM BALKAN WARS

Saw Active Service in Janina, Formerly Known As Epirus—Fought With Body of Volunteers.

John Milton, who left this city for Greece about six months ago to assist his countrymen in their fight to drive the Turks from Europe, returned last evening, having been about twenty days on the journey from the port of Patras, where he took ship for Milan. From this place he went by rail to Havre, and there boarded a steamship for New York. He visited Montreal on his way to Janesville.

As one of a party of eighty volunteers, Milton took a steamer through the canal and Gulf of Corinth to Volos. From there they went by rail as far as Kalabaka in the northern part of Thessaly, and marched across the border of Epirus, Turkish territory, to Metzo. This required about forty hours' time.

About twenty-two days of marching out of Metzo, the little band of soldiers reached Delvino, a short distance from the coast of the Ionian sea, and there they joined the main body of the army fighting in that part of the country, which numbered about 1,600 men. Near this point they encountered a body of about 3,000 Turks who drove them back.

The Greeks then retreated to Agro Sarania, on the coast, where they awaited them, and conveyed them to Corfu in the island of the same name. They stayed here for two days but did not go ashore. At the end of that time they sailed for Preveza, marched from there to Luro, where the volunteer army was officially disbanded. Most of them returned to Athens, going part way by boat, and part way by rail. Milton went back to his home town, Etoliken, in the west of Greece, to remain until he returned to the United States.

The efforts of the volunteer army were devoted chiefly to the protection of helpless countrymen in Epirus from marauding and pillaging bands of Turks, with whom small encounters were frequent. All Greeks in the enemy's country were encouraged to return to their homes. Scenes of desolation, burned villages, farm houses and barns were seen everywhere the Turkish soldiers had passed. The number of Greek volunteers in service throughout the contested territory was about 15,000.

The extent of the Greek military operations was marked roughly by a line drawn through Tepelini on the west, Monastir, in central Macedonia, and Kavala on the east. Kavala was jointly occupied by the Greeks and Bulgarians. To the northwest the Montenegrans fought their campaign, to the north the Serbians, and to the northeast the Bulgarians, the different countries having an understanding as to their respective parts in the war.

BRIDGE SIDEWALK PLACED IN DANGER

Supporting Girder on Court Street Structure Relieved of Pressure That Forced it to Bend.

Disentanglement and release of the wreckage that pressed with enormous force against the piers and supports of the Court street bridge averted the apparent danger of the sidewalk on its north side, being dropped into the river, possibly with some loss of life. Chief Klein yesterday discovered that the girder which supports the walk on that side was bent in about two inches for a distance of about fifty feet, and had the pressure not been removed it might have given way with the results mentioned.

The firemen worked from nine o'clock yesterday morning until five o'clock last evening. By two o'clock the debris that had accumulated between and against the piling of the Conrad buildings and the piers of the bridge had been removed and the rest of the afternoon was devoted to guiding safely through the wreckage that was loosened just below the Milwaukee street bridge. Great strength was needed to dislodge some of the floating timber. Twelve men pulled with all their strength to move one piece against the stream and to a position where it could be released without danger, and just when this was accomplished the tackle block gave way.

TWO BOYS ARE INJURED PLAYING WITH TORPEDO

Floyd Warn, of Brodhead, Loses Thumb of Left Hand—Younger Companion Hit by Fragments.

Brodhead, April 5.—Floyd Warn, aged fourteen and a younger companion, with the surname of Nipple, six or seven years old, were injured this afternoon by the explosion of a railway torpedo, with which they were playing. The succeeded in their attempt to make it explode by pounding it on a cement walk with stones. The left hand of the Warn boy was badly torn, the thumb practically torn off and flying fragments of the explosive pierced his face in several places. The Nipple boy was also struck in the face by fragments but his injuries were not serious.

WANTS A STATE BOARD TO LICENSE TAILOR SHOPS

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., April 5.—Assemblyman Walsh's bill for a state board to license tailors and inspect tailor shops was opposed by Assemblyman Minkley, a socialist member, and Paul Fankalla, an officer of the Madison tailors' union, before the assembly committee on public welfare yesterday. Minkley said it would drive many men out of the trade, that there was no call for it, and that it would create a monopoly for men like Mr. Walsh who is a tailor.

Mr. Walsh's speech was the hit of the afternoon. One of his observations was that Eve was the first tailor; she made a suit of fig leaves for Adam.

Assemblyman Edward J. Burke spoke for the bill. It provides for a state board of examiners of three members, to be paid a fee per diem, and it is intended that the fees of tailors for licenses shall relieve the state of any burden. One of its principal functions, it provides, is the investigation of the sanitary conditions of shops.

CLINTON

Clinton, April 5.—Wild geese have not been near Clinton for several years until this spring, and are now very plentiful. H. A. Rogers, W. H. Northrop, Paul McKinney and Burdette Rogers have killed twenty-nine so far.

During the electrical storm Wednesday night lightning struck the home of George Severson, two miles southwest of town. Striking the chimney it went through to the lower floor into the room where Mrs. Severson was sitting, knocking her from the chair to the floor. Although badly shocked she was uninjured. The bolt of lightning passed through a tin bucket setting on the pantry floor, also through a tin dipper which was in the bucket. It bored a hole through both as clean as though struck through with a high power rifle. The only damage to the house was a few shingles torn from the roof near the chimney.

Fred Rogers of Delavan, formerly of this place, and Miss Cella Winston of Delavan were quietly married in Chicago on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis, who for several years lived in the E. L. Benedict farm, have moved back to Clinton and expect to spend the summer either in town or in the country near here.

C. Warner Irish was in Delavan, Wednesday, on business.

Mrs. Flora Smith was in Beloit on Thursday.

Mrs. Fred Whitmore entertained a few friends at a six o'clock tea last evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stoney entertained their neighbors and friends on Thursday evening at their beautiful home just west of town on Milwaukee road.

One of the nicest social events of the season was the six o'clock dinner served to thirty-six ladies last night by Mrs. Fitch R. Barnum and Mrs. Albert A. Cleveland at the pretty home of the former Corner Milwaukee avenue and Church street.

The ladies of the Art Circle surprised Mrs. H. N. Konkrite yesterday afternoon the occasion being Mrs. Konkrite's birthday.

Dr. Billig, D.D.S., stopped off here yesterday afternoon between trains on his way from Janesville to Harvard.

Mrs. A. P. Inman went to Emerald Grove yesterday afternoon to visit her mother.

Mrs. L. W. Gillies went to Janesville yesterday afternoon to visit friends over Sunday.

The new Lyceum committee have the course for next year and comprises the following excellent numbers:

The Orphean male quartet, the Crescent Company (ladies), Eugene Baker, lecturer, and the University girls, a company of young ladies.

HUSBAND FINDS BODY OF WIFE IN GARRET

Mrs. Lewis Sisson, Residing Near Hanover, Takes Own Life During Absence of Husband.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Footville, Wis., April 5.—Mrs. Lewis Sisson, the wife of a farmer residing near Hanover, took her own life about ten o'clock this morning by cutting her throat while her husband had driven to Footville to attend to some business matters. When he returned at noon he found the doors locked and had to force an entrance to his home. The body of his wife was found lying in the garret. Mrs. Sisson was thirty-seven years old and was born at Albany, Green county. The family had resided on the farm, about two miles east of Footville, for five or six years. Mrs. Sisson had been in poor health for two months, and evidently was suffering from a nervous breakdown and melancholia. When neighbors early this morning inquired after her health they heard that she was somewhat improved. She was at Footville one day this week and attended the Roman Catholic church there last Sunday.

Surviving Mrs. Sisson are her husband; a daughter, Mildred Sisson; her aged mother, Mrs. John Keith; three sisters, Mrs. John Martin of Hanover; Mrs. Joseph Welch and Mrs. Jerry McCulloch of Footville; and three brothers, John K. of Monticello, Michael of Hanover, and Edward of Albany. Funeral announcements will be made later.

NOTICE.
My wife having left my bed and board, I will not pay any debts contracted by her in my name on or after this date. Dated April 5, 1913.

PART OF UNIVERSITY IN POLITICS REBUKED

STATE SUPERINTENDENT CARY VINDICATED BY RESULTS OF ELECTION.

LEGISLATORS OPPOSED

Show Signs of Restiveness Under McCarthy Tutelage—Financial Side of the Recent Floods.

(By Ellis B. Usher.)

Milwaukee, April 5.—Although very skeptical as to the claim of these late days when a small minority of the voters speak, a "voice of the people" much less "the voice of God," I am constrained, in the instance of the re-election of State Superintendent Cary, last Tuesday, to accept the result without complaint. So accepting it the logical interpretation of the overwhelming vote against Mr. Kittle means that there is a growing disposition, at least, even among Progressives, to resent the top-down presumption of the State University, as modestly confessed by such oracles as Charlie McCarthy, that they are "the whole cheese" in Wisconsin. Mr. Cary has had occasion to tell the public some things about "the bunch" in the Hills that, a few years ago back, would have been less majestic. I am not an enemy of the University, nor would I discount its great value, or its achievements, but if it can take a hint when it gets a real jolt now is an opportunity. The state upset the old Stalwart oligarchy just because it could not realize itself. Nothing is more, fickle than political prestige and the farther the University keeps away from politics the safer will be its future.

This week the assembly also gave the University a shaking up, and the present legislature has many symptoms of restiveness under the McCarthy tutelage. Charlie's book telling how he handled the legislature was a little too strong, even for the present order of statesmen. I am not deciding him, he is a capable man and in his place, a very useful one, but he has been inclined to assume the same role that "Boss" Koyes pursued, to his political destruction. The time is new but the danger is old. The Progressive is now in chair of authority and they that sit not at his right hand are bound to sit among the scornful. It is human nature, and will repeat itself, just as it did with old abolitionists. The wise old agriculturists who advised the boys, when the sky looked threatening, not to cut more hay than they could move away, is still worthy of attention. On his part, Mr. Cary has his vindication by a small minority, but enough, and it is to be hoped that he will not make the mistake of traveling backward. There is a live job, ahead, for him.

The financial losses of the flood in Ohio and Indiana, were forecast a week ago, better than the loss of life, which, happily, has shrunk to a few hundred, though bad enough. The financial side of it is interesting people quite seriously, for $100,000,000 of that sort is dead loss. It isn't even insured. Money hasn't been easy. Conditions in Germany and in the Balkans have been drawing our gold to Europe in large quantities, and nobody is chipping much. Interest rates are stiff, and I learned, this week, that a good deal of cash is being hoarded. It may be a good thing that our banks are not as small as they once were, for the dollar is smaller than it used to be, and an emergency of $100,000,000, here, a Chinese demand for $100,000,000 and $500,000,000 needed to pay for the Balkan war, with France and the United States, the most promising leaders, is not a situation that will loosen up business at present. The extra session of Congress which will convene next week has its aspects of uneasiness to many. You should think of it yourself, if you had money, however little, to invest. From men who have been in Washington the impression seems to be that the tariff will not be fixed in a hurry. The Democrats will have their own disagreements, and Mr. La Follette is going to "flock for himself," and hand out "bone" on the old man of adjusting the tariff to the differences in labor cost, which, as it can never be done, is a remarkably safe pedestal to talk from. Even the protectionists are more afraid of some of Bryan's currency "bugs" than they are of tariff changes, if it can measure them by the talk I hear in Milwaukee. One sign of anxiety that would escape many people is the campaign that is on to sell bonds of every sort and kind. Naturally for such conditions, the very "gilt edge" railroad bonds are cheaper than almost anything. The railroads need money. Milwaukee never had such a swarm of bond sellers as now. The Chicago banks and bond houses are sending men in here, and taking offices, and all Wisconsin is being combed by them. It is a good time to "sit tight," and have some loose money in your jeans. We are not going to have any "boom" on in business this season, unless the signs are hung wrong. Nor does there seem to be cause for alarm. That is discounted as far as possible. A recent issue of the Wall Street Journal speaks as if the local conditions I have alluded to were general. It says:

"Not since the panic have bonds declined as rapidly as they have in the past two months. For that reason, among others, bankers expect that bonds are going to advance with the easing of the money situation, which seems now to be in sight throughout the world. Attention of the general public is being directed by many methods to the present bargain prices in bonds and it is likely that this will have an effect on the demand."

Speculation is about dried up and the bankers and brokers are all out hunting for the chap with a nest egg. If things are as conservatively bankers up as they look, there's no banger, but the shrewdest men I talk to say: "Don't get gay!"

An advertisement for the Erie. As I suggested, last week, the Erie had a chance to show its place last week. Its passenger trains were coming through by Saturday and on Tuesday General Agent Pheasant got word to accept freight. One thing that helped out the Erie, greatly, although it was damaged less than most of its competitors, in Ohio, was the fact that it had 5,000 men, west of Marion, at work on its new track. They were rushed to the assistance of the regular force to hurry the work of repair. It was fortunate, also, that there was small damage to the new work west of Marion, so the Erie will be one of the first trunk lines to fully recover. No business will be turned away, now. No delays will occur, and, if the weather holds good a few days the Erie will be in regular trim from end to end.

A Bell Telephone Advertisement. One of the most striking examples of the value of large resources, both physical and financial, and of the superior safety of a nation-wide service, over anything merely local, was given by the Bell Telephone System during the recent floods. With cash reserves and surplus exceeding $100,000,000, with 140,000 employees, and an organization that moved them with the precision of an army, to the places where they were most needed, the Bell System gave the country an illustration of generalship and service that was remarkable, and it not only kept open communications for itself but for its associate company, the Western Union Telegraph. The Bell methods, as well as its apparatus, are standardized. The man in Wisconsin can help in Ohio, for the way of doing things is the same everywhere. As a matter of fact Wisconsin has sent its quota to the relief of the Ohio and Indiana situation. But it is the command of these resources that makes them available. The Bell organization at Chicago has its central authority, and the orders from headquarters, saved any confusion in the placing of men or resources.

The Niagara, the flagship of Commodore Peary, which is being raised and rebuilt to join the Centennial celebration of its great victory, will be a quaint reminder of the days when our fathers did great deeds. The little brig was 110 feet over all and her tiny, smooth-bore guns would be about as imposing today as a battery of play cannon, such as small boys have, for amusement. Think of such a small wooden sailing craft alongside a modern leviathan of steel the length of a city block, carrying more men than Perry had in his fleet, and with guns one shot from which would annihilate any wooden vessel. But the contrast would be less if Perry's sailors could awake to blink the electrical illumination of the fleet that will this summer honor their memories. They saved the Great Lakes and the Northwest Territory to the Union. Their achievement was mighty if their navy now seems ill-fitted. Preparations for the celebration, in Milwaukee, in August, are progressing.

The Latin League of Wisconsin Colleges will have its first contest at the West Division High school in this city, next Friday. A number of contestants have entered and prizes will be awarded. The first prize is the Louis G. Kirschner Latin Memorial prize of $250. There will be three medals awarded, of gold, silver and bronze, respectively, and a trophy cup of ancient classical design, from Tiffany's, New York. This League is striving to bring the classics back to their proper place in modern education, and the event is one of unique interest. Most of the Wisconsin colleges are taking some part.

Short Notes. The election just held was phenomenally small in votes. Less than 25,000. Fewer were cast in the primary. Less than a third of the voting population. The number steadily shrinks, from election to election. Governor Scofield celebrated his seventy-first birthday last week. He is one of our veterans of war and peace and has a warm spot in the hearts of a lot of people, who admire his ability, courage and patriotism. He keeps young in spirit, can swear at the mention of "Teddy," just as well for all I can see, as he could six or eight years ago. I suspect he's a "Tory," or entitled to some other opprobrious epithet.

Next week the Davidson will have a jolly musical comedy "Gypsy Love," by Lehar, the composer of the "Merry Widow." The company of 100 is headed by Arthur Albino and Phyllis Partington, who are well known to musical comedy lovers.

Hardly Worth the Finding. An advertisement recently appeared in a daily paper in Germany offering a reward for a watch lost from an aeroplane.

One of the Unique Things About the Cadillac Is Its Freedom From Rivalry

AND THIS CARRIES WITH IT AN ASTONISHING IMMUNITY FROM CRITICISM. YOU CAN CONFIRM THIS IN YOUR OWN COMMUNITY—WHEREVER IT MAY BE. CADILLAC DEALERS SELDOM DISCUSS OTHER CARS—THEY DO NOT FIND IT NECESSARY. DEALERS IN OTHER CARS DO NOT FIND IT PRUDENT TO ATTEMPT TO DISPARAGE THE CADILLAC. AND ITS MOST ARDENT COMPETITORS PAY IT TRIBUTE. THIS CONDITION IS SO UNUSUAL IN ANY FIELD OF INDUSTRIAL ENDEAVOR THAT IT WILL BE WELL WORTH YOUR WHILE TO STUDY THE REASONS. YOU WILL FIND THOSE REASONS IN THE FEATURE WHICH CHARACTERIZE THE CAR ITSELF.

An engine of 40-50 horsepower which those who know motor car engines recognize as unsurpassed in fineness of construction and in capabilities commensurate with its proportions. A cooling system so adequate that overheating is practically unknown. A lubricating system so competent, so simple, so free from annoyance that you scarce realize its existence. A carburetor so efficient, so flexible that it needs acknowledge no superior. A clutch so smooth, so velvety in its action, so simple and so dependable that it leaves nothing to be desired. A system of electrical cranking, lighting and ignition (now in its second successful year on the Cadillac) so nearly 100 per cent efficient that it would be difficult to more nearly approach perfection. A steering mechanism so steady, so safe, and so sure, possessing none of the attributes which might make it otherwise, that you always feel secure. Axles so strong so substantial that they are equal to any reasonable demands. A spring suspension so soft, so flexible so yielding that it abundantly justifies the popular saying:—"The Cadillac carries its own good road with it." A car in all, designed with such consummate skill and executed with such painstaking care that it will uphold the name of "Cadillac" and all that the name implies.

Cadillac

a name which stands for sturdiness and dependability, a name which stands for enduring service, a name which stands for comfort and luxury in motoring, a name which stands for economy of operation and maintenance, a name which stands for real and substantial value, a name which is honored in unstinted measure wherever motor cars are known.

HUERTA GOVERNMENT TO GIVE ATTENTION TO ADMINISTRATION

New Mexican Regime Will Devote Less Attention to Politics Than Its Predecessor.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Mexico City, April 5.—"Less politics and more administration," the watchword of Porfirio Diaz, has become the slogan of the new Huerta government. In the days of Porfirio Diaz cabinet ministers, heads of departments and official incumbents generally, if they had opinions contrary to government policy, discreetly kept them to themselves. With the advent of Madero the pent-up flood of political expression deluged the country. Political orators went to extremes in airing their views. From platforms throughout the republic the acts of the administration were criticized to the point of vilification. Administrative affairs were allowed to suffer.

President Huerta, in his first public utterances, made it plain that his policies were to be of a different order. To a group of newspaper men whom he summoned to the palace, he expressed his appreciation of a free press, but intimated to them that their efforts should be directed along lines of aiding in re-establishment of peace, rather than toward hunting out difficulties with which to confront the administration.

"In a word," he cautioned them, "abandon for the moment political questions and give preference to those of administration."

"I am convinced," he added, "that it is not wise, in the present moment of our national life, for you to occupy yourselves with affairs purely political, but rather with those matters which have a bearing on the pacification of the country."

Caricaturists also will ply their art with more circumspection. With the person of Madero they were accustomed to take every liberty, and were permitted to do so. Before President Huerta had been in office two weeks he sent for the editor of one of the best known comic weeklies of the capital, calling his attention to a caricature of himself, the president said to the editor:

"I don't like that. I wish you wouldn't print my picture that way."

"But, Mr. President, I—"

"Well, that's all. I don't want you to print these caricatures because—"

"Well, don't. Good-bye."

The editor departed, and it is safe to say that he will think twice before repeating the offense.

That peace would return to Mexico almost automatically, after the overthrow of the Madero government, was the belief of thousands of optimists, both Mexicans and foreigners; but before the new administration was a month old it was evident that it had undertaken a task the completion of which was by no means simple. A majority of those who had been fighting against Madero laid down their arms, but a new army of rebels arose, and the Mexican situation was not unlike that of a play in which the actors had been changed and a few shifts of scenery made. Enough of the old Zapatista army remained under arms to provide the government with its problem in the south, while Governor Venustiano Carranza, of Coahuila and Governor Pesquera, of Sonora, furnished a new army in the north to take the place of Pascual Orozco's forces.

The movement begun by Carranza created less alarm in the capital than did that of the rebellious executive in Sonora. Early in the campaign against Carranza the government made some headway, but in the northwest the first tricks were taken by the rebels, who gained a decided advantage in the occupation of Nogales and Agua Prieta. The defeat of Col. Kosterlitzky on prestige for the new rebels, who had dubbed themselves "Constitutionalists."

Confidence in an early suffocation of this new revolt was expressed at the National Palace, and plans were made for sending an army of not less than ten thousand against Maytorena, Pesquera and Obregon, the rebel leaders, but this optimism was not fully shared by the public.

Friends of the administration refused to admit the strength of a rebellion based largely on sentiment or personalities. This new revolt, based on these two things, but behind it there is a well defined grievance expressed by those who insist that the new administration is nothing more than a return to power of the old utilitarian group, who, they allege, will make no effort to put into effect the reforms promised in the "Plan of San Luis Potosi" on which Madero's revolution was based. Primarily the new revolt is based on sentiment. Its leaders are, or pretend to be, horrified by the killing of Madero and Pino Sauré and characterize Huerta as a mere usurper. To them Madero dead, and now a martyr, is more powerful, perhaps, than he was during the last months of his life. Whether the contention of the capital that the movement against Huerta is bound to fail, is true or not, it is a fact that the rebels in the northwest gained many recruits during the first days of the rebellion.

Military men realize that a campaign in Sonora would be by no means simple. There is reason to believe that it will not be easy to get together in a short time the ten thousand men it is proposed to place in Sonora. If this is done, however, their mobilization and transport will be a difficult task. The movement of any army of ten thousand in Mexico means the movement also of thousands of women, a necessary adjunct under the army's present organization, since these women take the place largely of a commissary department. Transit by land of from ten to fifteen thousand human beings, together with artillery, horses, mules and other equipment, presents manifold difficulties. The easiest way would be to send them by sea to Guaymas, but Mexico has none too many transports.

The government counts upon the rebels being unable to secure any great quantity of money, and believes that arms and ammunition will be difficult to procure. On the other hand, however, the government will have to secure great amounts of money if it successfully carries out an aggressive policy. The administration believes, apparently with some reason, that it will have not difficulty in raising the one hundred and twenty million peso ($20,000,000) loan recently authorized; but even this amount probably will have to be augmented if the revolution continues for any length of time. When the executive asked congress to authorize this loan it was assumed that the government would not have to continue facing civil war.

RACQUET CHAMPIONSHIP AT STAKE IN NEW YORK

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, April 5.—Sportsmen on both sides of the Atlantic are keenly interested in the series of matches for the world's racquet championship to be played between "Jock" Soutar of Philadelphia and Charles Williams of London, the first of which matches takes place today at the Queen's Club in London. The agreement calls for four out of seven matches, to decide the victor. The matches are to be played alternately in London and Philadelphia. In addition to the international championship the result of the series will decide the award of a purse of $500 made up by the supporters of two men in England and the United States.

YOUNG LADIES GIVE EXCELLENT PROGRAM

Misses Marion Calkins, Barbara Pearsall and Beth Baker Present Musical Selections—High School Contest.

Evansville, April 5.—The musical program by the Misses Marion Calkins, Barbara Pearsall and Beth Baker yesterday in the H. S. building, is deserving of more than a passing mention. The young ladies gave this program for their regular Senior essay work and each proved herself a genuine artist.

About a dozen invited guests aside from the regular H. S. students and teachers had the pleasure of hearing this which is to be regretted, as it was certainly worthy of a larger audience. The numbers were given with Miss Marion Calkins at the piano, Miss Barbara Pearsall vocal solos and Miss Beth Baker playing the violin obligato. The last named young lady also read "The Blue Flower" with the reception and expression of an artist.

Annual Contests.

A splendid program was given by the high school pupils contesting in the annual declamatory and oratorical contest. The honorary places being won by the following: Third place, Miss Edith Denny, who spoke "The Bell of St. John." Second place won by Miss Lucile Johnson, speaking "Dolly Go." First place by Miss Grace Haylett, speaking "Commencement." Those in the oratorical contest were:

Third place Merrill Hynes who gave "The Boy Orator of Zepatza City." Second place Earl Fellows, who gave "Reinza to the Romans." First place Clarence Mapes speaking "Sparticus to the Gladiators."

Miss Marjorie Wallace favored those present with a delightful piano solo. A number was given by the girls' Glee club and a vocal solo by Marc Webb, also an instrumental duet by Misses Marjorie Wallace and Ruth Christman. Principal Loyth of Evansville was present and gave the decision of the judges.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat
BY RUTH CAMERON

WHEN EXPLANATIONS ARE DUE.

THERE is such a thing as doing too much explaining and apologizing. There is also such a thing as doing too little.

The man who is always justifying himself loses our attention and our respect; the man who is always too proud to justify himself, often loses his chance for justice.

A man was telling me the other day about a misunderstanding which occurred at his business office. Two young men, of whom he was one, were blamed for a mistake. The fault really lay with the other man, but he, himself, was blameless, he said, and as he is an exceptionally fair-minded man even about things which concern himself, I believed him. But the other man went to their employer and made explanations which threw the blame on his confidant. "And so, you see," he concluded his story, "I'm in bad."

"But wouldn't your employer believe your side of the case?" I asked.

He threw back his head proudly. "I didn't give it to him," he said. "If he couldn't believe in me without my coming to him with explanations, he will have to disbelieve."

Now that is what I call a very unfair attitude. And yet it is the point of view which proud people often take. They go through the world demanding that they shall be understood and appreciated without any effort on their part. They regard such an effort as lowering themselves. They do not realize that this is a very busy world, and if people are going to be understood and appreciated, they've got to come half way.

To withhold an explanation as that man did is to deliberately lay one's self open to misunderstanding.

If one of the two parties fails to appear in a court of law, after due warning, the case goes against him by default. The presumption is that he did not have any case, and that is the natural presumption against any man who fails to present his side of such a misunderstanding.

A thoroughly nice young girl was once caught in a combination of circumstances that looked decidedly bad. Had she been one of those people who think their friends ought to believe in them without explanation, she would have been badly misjudged. But she was more reasonable than that. She said, "I wouldn't blame my best friend for being suspicious of me under such circumstances. We never really know what anyone will do, and it certainly looks bad on the surface." So, instead of waiting for people to talk, she went to one of her most gossip-loving friends and told her everything; with the proof. The gossip, delighted to have inside information, spread the explanation abroad, and a scandal was averted.

Implicit and unquestioning trust is a rare quality, even among friends. Since we seldom give it, we have no right to expect to receive it.

CHATS WITH THINKING WOMEN
by Barbara Boyd

Why He Didn't Get Along

HE had been engaged to do some gardening, and when he arrived he was told to take some stones from a pile and arrange them in a circle to enclose a flower-bed.

In a short time, the master of the house came out to see how the work was progressing, and found the man carrying two or three stones at a time, in his hands, from the pile to the other end of the yard where the flower-bed was to be.

A wheelbarrow stood nearby. But he seemed oblivious of it.

"Why don't you put the stones in the wheelbarrow and wheel a load at a time?" suggested the master of the house. "You'll save yourself a lot of steps."

"That's so. I never thought of it," replied the man, and obeyed with alacrity.

Then the master of the house turned his attention to the flower-bed in process of construction.

"Why don't you get a string and peg, and mark a true circle before you begin?" he asked the man. "If you lay it out by guess, you'll probably have it to do all over again."

"That's so," said the man. "I never thought of it."

The master of the house made some other pointed suggestions, to each of which the man cheerfully replied, "That's so. I never thought of it."

Yet this man wonders why he doesn't get along. He says he is willing to work, that he'll do anything he can get to do, that he doesn't mind hard work, but that he simply can't get work to do. And he says that fate has it in for some people; and no matter how hard they may try, they just simply can't succeed.

He doesn't see in the least that he is in any way responsible for this result, or that the way one works is quite as important a factor in success as willingness.

If you pointed out to him that his methods were not exactly those of a successful man, he would probably tell you that he was doing the best he could.

But he isn't. For he is not using his brains to their utmost capacity. His mind is not on the work he is doing. No man who is exercising his gray matter on the subject in hand will walk up and down a yard fifty times carrying two or three stones each time, when in every trip he nearly falls over a wheelbarrow.

But there are plenty of people who work in just this fashion, and wonder why they never get as much done as other people. There's many a housekeeper who walks endlessly back and forth across her kitchen, or to her refrigerator, or up stairs, or down cellar, when by "grouping" her work, a few trips would do.

There's many a business woman who carefully washes her hands and scrubs her nails, and then sharpens her pencil, or arranges dusty stock or cleans her typewriter; and then has the hand-washing to do over again. There's many of us who journey to the end of our day's work by the most difficult and circuitous path, when by taking a survey of the road before starting, we could see many a short cut, and many a way to avoid a steep grade.

But like the gardener, "We do not think."

But there are plenty who do think, and they easily pass us and gather in the prizes.

But nobody puts an embargo on our thinking but ourselves. Nobody stops us from thinking. And since by thinking we gain so much, why not think? Why not think carefully over every piece of work we undertake, and plan to do it in the quickest and most efficient manner?

before the meal.

The casserole is an earthen dish—usually brown—made with a close-fitting cover. It is the serving as well as the cooking dish, consequently much extra dish washing is saved by this method of cooking. It is a labor saving device, taking the place of half a dozen pots and pans in the kitchen. In all our modern methods for good housekeeping, we are thoroughly convinced that much less heat may be used in our cooking.

Hamburg Steak En Casserole.

Sauce Materials: Tomatoes, one can; sweet green pepper, one; sliced onion, one; chopped parsley, one tablespoonful; salt, one teaspoonful; water, one point.

Meat Materials: Round, chopped steak, one pound; egg, one; grated bread crumbs, one-quarter cup; grated celion, salt, paprika, one teaspoonful; spaghetti, one-quarter package.

Utensils: Casserole, steel spider, sauce pan, measuring cup, vegetable knife, grater, teaspoon, sieve.

Directions: Turn the tomatoes and all the sauce ingredients, except the salt and butter, into the sauce pan and cook slowly half an hour; then press through a sieve into the casserole. Add the salt, butter and the hamburger balls prepared as follows:

Chop the steak fine, add the well beaten egg with the remaining meat ingredients, mixing well. Divide into ten or twelve portions and shape into balls. Make a little butter or bacon fat in the spider, roll and brown the meat balls in this and put into the sauce in the casserole. Cover and cook slowly as described—on top of the stove or in a slow oven over three-quarters of an hour. In the meantime, cook spaghetti in plenty of boiling, salted water until tender. Drain and rinse in cold water. When ready to serve, remove without breaking the meat balls, turn in half a cup of grated cheese and the spaghetti, mixing well together. Return the meat balls, cover and slowly heat again and serve in the casserole.

Chicken En Casserole.

Materials: Chicken, three and one-half or four pounds; chicken stock, one pint; butter and other fat, three tablespoonfuls; sherry wine, four tablespoonfuls; mushrooms, eight; potato balls, twenty-four; tiny onions, six; carrot balls, twelve; salt and paprika.

Utensils: Casserole, sauce pan, vegetable scoop, steel spider, table-spoon, vegetable knife.

Directions: Clean and separate the chicken in pieces at the joints and wipe each with a wet cloth. Take out the neck, feet, tip ends and wings and put into the sauce pan with a sprig of parsley, half a bay leaf, three cloves and three cups of water. Simmer gently until the liquid is reduced one-third. At the same time dip each piece of chicken in cream and then in flour and saute in the melted butter and fat in the spider. When nicely browned on both sides, transfer them to the casserole. Add the hot chicken stock, season with salt, pepper and paprika, cover and cook on an asbestos mat on the stove over a simmering fire or in a very low oven with one burner, about an hour and a half—about the time four hours. Melt enough butter again in the spider to saute the peeled mushrooms, carrots and potatoes, cut in balls with the potato scoop, or any fancy vegetable cutter, and the very small onions about the size of potato balls. When browned slightly, arrange in the casserole on the chicken, with a little sherry, if you use it, and more seasoning is necessary. Return to the slow fire for half an hour or until the vegetables are done. The casserole may be sealed tight with paste made from flour and water to help retain the flavor.

COOKERY FOR THE SICK.

Sir Henry Thompson said: "I have come to the conclusion that more than half the disease which embitters the middle and later life is due to avoidable errors in diet." It is safe to say that two-thirds of all diseases are brought about by errors in diet.

The study of foods and their effect on the individual is of equal importance to the study of drugs.

Often the entire return to health is dependent upon the food prepared for the patient.

Children more readily succumb to disease than older people, hence the necessity of paying the strictest attention to their nourishment and diet.

To those who are accustomed to visiting children's hospitals, the subject of mal-nutrition is very much discussed, as its evidence is everywhere manifest.

There are comparatively few foods that are at their best in an uncooked state. They neither taste so good, nor are they as digestible as when treated to some kind of cooking.

The question of feeding of persons in health is always of great importance, but when one succumbs to disease, the feeding is of supreme moment.

Where the temperature is high, and there is great wasting of the tissues, it is necessary that a large amount of easily digested food, usually in liquid form, be used. Water is used in quantities, as that carries off waste products.

With some convalescents food must be restricted, while others must be stimulated to eat.

Some of the important things to remember in feeding sick people, are—not to ask them what they would like, for usually when they get it the desire for the food is past.

The food should appeal to the eye. It should appeal to the taste. It should be digestible and nourishing.

HOUSEHOLD
HINTS

Cinnamon Rolls—Cream one cup lard and butter mixed with two cups of brown sugar, add two eggs, one cup milk and two teaspoons baking powder sifted with enough flour to make a dough easily handled. Roll half inch thick, sprinkle with cinnamon and roll dough up same as jelly roll about three-fourths inch thick. Sprinkle granulated sugar over the slices and bake in moderate oven.

Doughnuts. (fine)—Mix one-half cup sour milk with one-half cup molasses and one even teaspoon ginger, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon soda, one egg, dash of nutmeg and four cups flour. Mix to a soft dough, so it can be rolled and cut in doughnut shape, and fry in hot fat. When done, sprinkle with powdered sugar. These are delicious and something different than the others.

Egg Noodles—Three eggs, one-half eggshellful cold water; mix with flour as stiff as can be handled. Divide in three parts, roll very thin, lay on cloth and dry; fold over twice, roll up and cut thin as possible. Lay on platter to thoroughly dry before using. Stir in boiling beef or chicken broth, remove at once and serve.

The secret of good noodles lies in finely cutting and properly drying. Never use flour on them when cutting, as that makes them sticky. As they will keep indefinitely they can be made and put away for an emergency.

Cruellers ("like our mothers made")—One tablespoon each of sweet milk, sugar and melted lard, one egg; mix with flour as stiff as noodles; a little salt; roll thin, cut in strips to braid or cut slits in strips and weave on fingers. Drop in hot lard, turn, and they are done. Have lard deep as for fried cakes. Three eggs make about three dozen.

Fig Tapioca Cream—Half cup tapioca soaked over night in two cups cold water; cook until transparent. Chop one-half pound figs, add one cup water and one cup of sugar; cook till smooth, then mix with tapioca, flavor with vanilla, chill and serve with whipped or plain cream. Fine.

HEART and HOME
PROBLEMS
BY MRS. ELIZABETH
THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young widow, age twenty, with no children, having been a widow more than two years. Two months ago a brother-in-law fell in love with me and wanted to take me for a wife, but wants to wait ten years to get an education. Would it be right to love him or any other? Now, since I haven't seen him in two months, he doesn't love me like he did when with him, he tells me. Is it best to let him go?

Let him go, by all means, and look around for a man who is less selfish and more considerate of you.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of fifteen. (1)—How would be a nice way to wear my hair the day I am confirmed? I wish to wear ribbons. How should they be worn? (2)—What kind of goods should I get that would make up pretty and not be too expensive? (3)—What color slippers would be the nicest with a white dress? (4)—What would be a nice answer to give a person who congratulates you after you are confirmed? (5)—Will vaseline harm the eyebrows and will it make them darker? (6)—How can a person get rid of freckles without harming the skin? (7)—My face most always gets red when dancing. What can I do to prevent this? (8)—How would be a very nice way to ask a boy to dance, and thank him afterwards when ladies' choice? (9)—What would be a nice answer to give when a boy asks for a dance, and you wish to accept? And when he thanks you for one?

DARK EYES.

(1)—In a modest coil at the back of the head, with a white ribbon bandeau. (2)—Cotton voile is pretty and inexpensive. (3)—White. (4)—Say "Thank you—I am very happy." (5)—It will make them darker. (6)—Try buttermilk or lemon juice. (7)—It is the exercise that does it. Don't dance so hard. (8)—Say "May I have this dance?" and "I have enjoyed this dance very much." (9)—

First Idea of Sewing Machine.

The earliest attempt at sewing by machinery of which there is any authentic record was in 1755, in which year a machine was patented in England by Charles F. Weisenthal. In this machine the stitch was formed by a needle, having two points with an eye at mid-length, which passed completely through the goods in imitation of hand sewing.

MELANCHOLY
WOMEN

Should Profit by Mrs. Hurley's Experience—Her Own Story Here Told.

Eldon, Mo.—"I was troubled with displacement, organic inflammation and female weakness. For two years I could not stand on my feet long at a time and I could not walk two blocks without enduring cutting and drawing pains down my right side which increased once a month. I have been at that time purple in the face and would walk the floor. I could not lie down or sit still sometimes for a day and a night at a time. I was nervous, had very little appetite, no ambition, melancholy, and often felt as though I had not a friend in the world."

"After I had tried most every female remedy first, without success, my mother-in-law advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and gained in strength every day. I have now no trouble in any way and highly praise your medicine. It advertises itself."—Mrs. S. T. HURLEY, Eldon, Missouri.

How blessed is the man who asks no office, low or high, who rustles at his useful tasks, nor yearns to bleed and die! No spoiled ambitions make him sore or cause him to repine; and every day, at every door, he gets the "Welcome" sign. He is no politician's pup, to follow him through town; no whippersnapper higher up can ever call him down. He does not need to while and sob in some cheap statesman's ears, PATRIOT that he may hold his duty for another term of years. It isn't needful to pretend he loves the unwashed jay; he needn't call this bosom friend each rube who comes his way. He cares not far the smiles or frowns of people in high place, but, in his old blue hand-me-downs, he toils with skill and grace. From all official fetters free, he herds his loving kine, and prunes the spreading pumpkin tree, and trains the cabbage vine. Administrations oft may change, and patriots may weep; such things do not his plans derange, or make him lose his sleep. Let others break their hearts to nab those prizes dear to men; all quietly he keepeth tab upon his setting hen. How blessed is the man who'd take no office, small or big! Who'd rather stay at home and make a boudoir for his pig!

Municipal Affairs Of Vital Interest

ST. PAUL MAYOR STATES POLICY AS TO PAVEMENTS

St. Paul, Minn.—Mayor Keller has submitted on its paving policy. The city shall do its own work in all cases, and shall not abandon that principle until actually about to be swamped by the rush of work. Crocoted blocks shall be the preferred paving for heavily traveled streets where the property will stand the cost, and where the grades are not too steep. On steep grades, sandstone shall be used. Brick, or another suitable and cheap material, shall be used on streets having car lines and which demand a moderately priced paving. Asphaltic concrete shall be used on streets needing a cheap paving, where there are no car lines. City Engineer Claussen and City Chemist Roehrich will draw up specifications for the manufacture of the material by the city, which will take the risk of suits for infringement of patents by the Warren Brothers, manufacturers of bitulithic. In addition to the other agreement, it was settled that every effort should be made to rush all work so that favorable prices could be obtained on materials, and that the city might be in a position to do its own work with dispatch.

The new addition to the asphalt plant, for which $25,000 was provided in this year's budget, will be equipped to make asphaltic concrete. Immediate work on the specifications will go forward, and every effort made to facilitate the paving. The "season" will open in about a month. —Municipal Journal.

MUNICIPAL ELECTRIC PLANT AT MARQUETTE IS SUCCESS

Marquette, Mich.—The city's light and power commission reports earnings of more than $43,000 net for the fiscal year ended March 31. The commission recently made effective a reduced classification, with a basic rate for lighting of 5 cents a K. W. hour. Because of a steadily increasing business little likelihood exists that the earnings will show any decrease, and they are expected to exceed $40,000 annually.

For a few years to come the discharge of bonds will take care of the surplus earnings, but the question of what is to be done with the earnings when the plant is free of debt will have to be met in the not distant future. More than $150,000 has been expended in new construction the past two years and the plant is now one of the most substantial and up-to-date in the country.

The electricity is generated from the waterpower of Dead river. Nearly 2,000 residences, 485 business places and the streets and parks are lighted and power is furnished to dozens of establishments. The city waterworks will be electrically operated before the close of the present year.

DRAWS ITS CONCLUSIONS ON PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

Municipal ownership is a public question that is discussed in many places. The public ownership commission of the National Civic Federation in the United States not long ago summarized its conclusions as follows:

Public utilities, whether in public or private hands, are best conducted under a system of legalized and regulated monopoly.

The success of municipal operation of public utilities depends upon the existence in the city of a high capacity for municipal government.

Franchise grants to private corporations should be terminable after a fixed period and meanwhile subject to purchase at a fair value.

Municipalities should have the power to enter the field of municipal ownership upon popular vote under reasonable regulation.

Private companies operating public utilities should be subject to public regulation and examination under a system of uniform records and accounts and of full publicity.

MILWAUKEE HAS NO FUNDS FOR MUNICIPAL CLEAN-UP

There will be no municipal "house cleaning" in Milwaukee this year. This was the announcement made yesterday by Public Works Commissioner F. G. Simmons, who qualifies his statement, however, by adding "unless the common council appropriates extra funds to make it possible."

The reason given for not continuing the three days' campaign against filth in the entire city this year is that no appropriation for the city cleaning campaign was made in 1913 budget.

However, the city will continue to cart away ashes, but Mr. Simmons advises neighbors to club together to hire teams to cart away all trash to be emptied from the cellar and from back yards. —Milwaukee Sentinel.

APPLETON GENERAL FUND NEARLY HUNDRED THOUSAND

(Appleton Post.)

Last Saturday there appeared in these columns of the city's general fund, the total of which was $97,387.12. That sum represents approximately what the city will have on hand and in the bank on April 1. Today anti-commission men on the streets are saying that a large portion of that $97,387 is money obtained as a result of the sale of waterworks bonds. This report is absolutely incorrect. The money represents exclusively city funds and includes not a penny of money secured by the sale of waterworks bonds.

PLAYGROUND PROGRESS MADE IN TWO CITIES

The Commercial Club of Clinton, Ia., has a plan under way for city beautification and public playgrounds.

When completed the city will have a park containing seventy-six city blocks. It will be one of the best systems of public parks in eastern Iowa.

The La Salle Commercial Club has secured plans for a playground of fifteen acres. This playground will be equipped with all kinds of playground apparatus, basket ball courts, lawn tennis, baseball diamonds, swimming pools for boys and girls, and also an agricultural section where students of the schools will demonstrate farming.

OILING OF CITY STREETS SAVES SPRINKLING EXPENSE

Oakland, Cal.—The extensive oiling and latest scientific treatment of street surfaces in the city during the last year will result in a saving of more than $10,000 to the street department through the elimination of street sprinkling. Thirty-five sprinklers will be all that will be required this year, though 45, costing the city on an average of $10 each daily, were used last year. During the present year many more miles of streets will be oiled. This method not only eliminates the dust, thus abolishing sprinkling, but also kills the growth of weeds and makes sweeping unnecessary. Last year the city paid $80,000 for water, most of which was used in street sprinkling.

OFFERS TWO THOUSAND TO COLLECT CITY REFUSE

Wilmington, Del.—A Newark firm, D. Laprete, a wholesale bottle dealer, has offered the street and sewer department of Wilmington more than $2,000 for the privilege of collecting the broken glass and tin cans from the city dumps. Heretofore the city has never derived any revenue from the ash heaps, and the refuse has been picked up by anyone who cared to do so for the bottles, etc., that they might gather. The board seemed to favor Mr. Laprete's proposition, as it will bring in quite a sum to the city for practically nothing on its part.

No Fires for Month.

Beloit.—The Beloit fire department faces an unprecedented situation. During the entire month of March it has not answered but one fire alarm and that time the fire caused no damage. This is the first time in the history of Beloit's department since it became a paid institution, that it has gone an entire month without a single call.

Water Consumption Increases.

Neenah, Wis.—The report of Superintendent of Waterworks, Jasperson for the year ending March 31, 1913, shows that a total of 134,821,000 gallons of water was consumed the past year, which is 55,399,000 gallons less than the year before. This is accounted for by the fact that meters were placed on the services this year. There were sixty more services in use this year than last.

Truck Will Be Late.

In a letter this morning from the American La France Fire Engine company, located at Elmira, N. Y., Chief Nygren was informed that it would be impossible to deliver the new fire truck before April 20, because of the great run of business. —Beloit News.

City Budget is Cut.

Appleton.—The city council has adopted a budget which is $5,500 less than that allowed for expenditures last year. The aldermen consider that $207,600 is enough on which to conduct the city government for the coming year.

TORPEDO BOAT DESTROYER LAUNCHED AT QUINCY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Quincy, Mass., April 5.—The torpedo boat destroyer Duncan was successfully launched today at the yards of the Fore River Ship building Company. It is the last of the other vessels of her class in the navy. She is a one-thousand-ton, twenty-nine knot boat, and will be equipped with Curtis turbines and oil-burning boiler.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

THE BRAGGART.

(By Howard L. Rann.)

The braggart is a human puff ball equipped with self starter. His motive power is compressed air, and he is able to make rapid headway until interrupted by an eyewitness who can testify to the facts.

Braggarts have existed ever since man quit climbing trees and took to wearing the belted Norfolk jacket.

Among the world's greatest braggarts are those who never got fifteen feet away from the commissary department, and then came home to describe how it felt.

The Hornet's Nest at the University of Chicago is a place where a man can brag about his day's sales the less show there is for his creditors.

The braggart is very often an inoffensive person who, by long practice, has trained himself to believe what he says. This is the hardest kind to deal with, as he never brags about anything that happened during the present generation.

When a braggart brings his narrative down to week before last, he generally aims to hit the truth at least once in every chapter, for fear of being exposed before he has time to back up.

It is a melancholy truth that men brag more than women, although women have fully twelve times as much to brag about.

If the average man should take a family of seven small children, rear them to the self-supporting age on the proceeds of the wash tub and pay off an $800 mortgage with the scrub brush, the chances are he would brag about it on his death bed and want the facts engraved upon his tombstone in letters that could be read from the street.

This is another reason why woman should not be allowed to have the ballot.

AMERICAN PILGRIMS ARRIVE IN ROME FOR CELEBRATION

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Rome, April 5.—The first of half a dozen large parties of American pilgrims who are to visit Rome for the celebration of the sixteenth centenary of the Peace of Constantine has arrived in the Eternal City and others are expected during the coming week.

Which will be one of the most notable of the three months' celebration. The chief feature of the week will be the solemn octave in the Pope's cathedral church, St. John Lateran. Each evening some visiting bishop will preach. Among the noted American prelates listed among the preachers are Archbishop Glennon of St. Louis and Archbishop Keane of Dubuque, both of whom are expected to arrive here shortly.

FEEL BADLY TODAY? CASCARETS TONIGHT

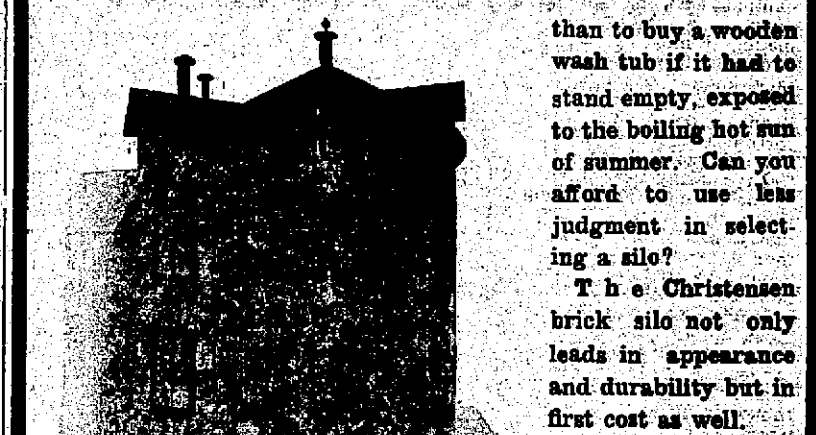

No Headache, Bilioousness, Sluggish Liver, Constipated Bowels or Sour Stomach by morning

No odds how bad your liver, stomach or bowels; how much your head aches, how miserable and uncomfortable you are from constipation, indigestion, biliousness, and sluggish intestines—you always get the desired results with Cascarets and quickly, too.

Don't let your stomach, liver and bowels make you miserable. Take Cascarets tonight; put an end to the headache, biliousness, dizziness, nervousness, sick, sour, gassy stomach, backache and all other distress; cleanse your inside organs of all the bile, gases and constipated matter which is producing the misery.

A 10-cent box means health, happiness and a clear head for months. No more days of gloom and distress. If you will take a Cascaret now and then. All druggists sell Cascarets. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

This monogram stands for all you can ask in a motor car.

20,000

What car will carry you that distance in greater comfort and safety, and with less trouble and expense than a Chalmers "36"?

It's a pretty poor car indeed that won't make a good showing in a salesman's demonstration.

But it takes a pretty good car to travel 20,000 miles and please you as well at the end as it did in the beginning.

Chalmers cars stand this test. Hundreds are driven this far every year. Some have been driven as high as 140,000 miles, and are still in daily service.

You can pay almost any price for a motor car, but even the highest priced won't carry you 20,000 miles in more comfort with greater economy, or with less mechanical attention than the medium-priced Chalmers "Thirty-Six."

No lower priced car will give you equal comfort, economy and reliability.

Long stroke motor, four-forward speed transmission, nickel steel axles, extra large brakes—these and many other features of design secure the mechanical excellence of the Chalmers.

Large valves, new style Chalmers piston rings, improved carburetor, Timken bearings throughout the running gear—these are some of the Chalmers features which make for economy.

Turkish cushions, 11-inch upholstery, long wheel base, large wheels and tires long, flexible springs—these are the things which make your Chalmers "Thirty-Six" comfortable. None more so.

Try the Chalmers "Thirty-Six" for 20,000 miles. By that time you will be agreed with us that no car at any price offers as much real automobile value for the money.

Let us give you your first Chalmers ride at your convenience.

Account of Operations During Vicksburg Siege

The following interesting account of the operations at Vicksburg fifty years ago appeared in a recent issue of the Madison Democrat and was written by H. W. Rood, patriotic lecturer for the Grand Army in Wisconsin.

There was not time during the civil war when conditions were more discouraging for the union army than they were fifty years ago this month of March.

The elections in the fall of 1862 were not nearly so favorable for the vigorous prosecution of the war as they should have been. There were all the time in the north who were more than indifferent concerning the saving of the union. They rejoiced covertly, if not openly, every time our army suffered a reverse. We called them copperheads. We could in a certain way, have honored them had they gone south and enlisted so as openly to fight against us. But they would not do that. They chose to live under the protection of the flag of the union, and at the same time show their contempt for it in such ways as they felt safe in doing.

We soldiers detected that in a man's character that made him a copperhead, and we still detect it.

I do not suppose that copperheads were ever more detestable than they were fifty years ago just now.

The elections had, as we well knew, rather unpopularity. The copperheads made a great deal of the fact. General Grant had been obliged soon after to give up his northern Mississippi campaign having the capture of Vicksburg in view; and the copperheads made the most of that. General Sherman had been unsuccessful in his attack upon Vicksburg during the very last days of 1862; and the copperheads made all they could out of that unfortunate undertaking. They declared that Sherman was crazy. General Grant's army was for three months in the swamps and among the bayous along the sides of the Mississippi just above Vicksburg, undertaking by four different plans to get upon hard ground east of the river, so as to attack that all-but-impregnable stronghold by land yet held, in spite of the most gallant and heroic efforts been unsuccessful; and, of course, the copperheads—with the near copperheads—made the very most of the fact of those failures. They declared that Grant was incompetent, and clamored for his removal, not, indeed, so much for the good of the cause as for the sake of fault-finding criticism. Some of them were newspaper men and so filled their papers with carping criticism.

Our army, camping upon the levees along the river, suffered from malarial disease and the brave men died at an alarming rate; yet, as a whole, they bore up wonderfully under those discouraging conditions. They faithfully and uncomplainingly did every duty, and were truly loyal to the silent commander who was too busy all that time to give much attention to the unsympathetic and unkind treatment accorded him by his carping critics. They were true and loyal soldiers.

During a whole or part of that dark winter of 1862-3 there were many Wisconsin men in those swamps and among the Mississippi bayous. The 23d regiment from this state—containing three companies largely recruited from Dane county—went down the river from Memphis in December, and was with General Sherman in his unsuccessful attack upon Chickasaw Bluffs, December 27-30. And the regiment was in all the activities about Vicksburg from that time until the surrender on the 4th of the following July. And what a six months it was! Scores of the men of that regiment were left buried in the levees along the river from Millkin's Bend to Young's Point, from Port Gibson to Champion's Hill and on to the lines about Vicksburg, and their bodies now rest in the beautiful national cemetery on the Vicksburg levee from which one can view all that low land track was half submerged during the strenuous campaign of the winter before the great stronghold was captured. We have some of the survivors of the 23d with us now. Belonging to our Post there are Captain John Sumner, Dr. H. B. Bird, then a fourteen-year-old boy, H. Bissell, John Gallagher, Louis C. Helm, Hector Lewis, Austin J. Laughlin, William H. Outhouse, William M. Post, George B. Pearl, William O. Stephenson and George B. Whare.

And there are many graves in Forest Hill and Calvary cemeteries where rest those who were boys and young men in the campaign of that winter against Vicksburg. The most of those in the national cemetery at Vicksburg rest in unknown graves. Of the 16,882 headstones there, 12,719 bear no names. Many of these mark the last resting places of Wisconsin boys. Our colored friends gather there by the thousand on Memorial Day to strew those graves with flowers. To them it is a sacred day.

Beside the 23d the following named regiments were among the bayous near Vicksburg that winter or early in the spring. The 8th went down the river from Memphis on the 13th of March and the 11th on the 19th. The 14th left Memphis on the 17th of January. The 6th arrived at Lake Providence February 1, the 17th left Memphis on the 20th of January, and the 18th on the 18th of that month. The 29th had been campaigning below Memphis ever since early in November, 1862. The 1st Wisconsin battery of light artillery arrived at the mouth of the Yazoo, near Vicksburg, on the 21st of December. The 6th battery left Memphis on its down-river trip on the 3rd of March, and the 12th battery on the first day of that month. All these I have mentioned had gone down toward Vicksburg before the middle of March. Besides these the 12th, 20th, 25th, 27th, and 32d infantry regiments joined the army later, so were in the siege.

While General Grant tried that winter four different plans for getting some passage through the bayous to the high ground back of Vicksburg, he had little faith that he could succeed in any of them. He knew that those plans principally to keep his men busy. He knew it was much better for them to be busy, expecting to accomplish something, than to be idle; and so he pushed those plans with vigor—just as if he expected success. And then he knew that the people of the north would be better satisfied if something was being done.

These activities occupied the last half of January and the months of February and March. The water was unusually high that winter. As soon as the dry land began to appear, General Grant commenced preparations for that particular feature of his Vicksburg campaign that his well-trained, prophetic vision convinced him would—though bold beyond the conception of most military men—lead to success. It was upon the 22nd day of March when he began the execution of his plan, which was in general this:

He would march his army division after division across the peninsula opposite Vicksburg to points on the river below. In the meantime Admiral Porter undertook to run gunboats and transports by the Vicksburg batteries. If he could get some of his boats below in a reasonably good condition, he would be able to transfer the army across the river to the Mississippi side.

On the night of the 30th of April the advance of Grant's army was taken across the river. Grant put it down into his Memoirs that the minute he had got a good boatload of his men across the river and on high and dry ground in Mississippi was one of the very happiest of his life.

On the first day of May he marched out and attacked the enemy at Port Gibson and gained a positive victory. He marched northeast and on the 27th of May beat the confederates at Raymond, sent General Sherman and McPherson out to drive General Joseph E. Johnston across the river at Jackson, thus preventing him from joining his army to Pemberton's, and then on the 16th gained the hard-fought battle of Champion's Hill, sending General Pemberton on a hurried march for his works at Vicksburg.

On the 17th he attacked Pemberton's rear at the bridge over the Big Black, thus increasing his speed. On the 18th Grant's army closed in upon the confederate lines in the rear of Vicksburg, and the next day he charged upon the works but could not capture them. The charge was repeated, but without success, on the 22d. Then followed the great siege of Vicksburg, which ended with the complete surrender of the place and all it contained on the 4th of July, 1863.

Yes, indeed, the winter and spring about Vicksburg, fifty years ago was an eventful time. Though conditions were so discouraging during the winter and up to the end of March, when General Grant began upon the remarkable plan of campaign conceived by his great military genius, things began to look different. When the Mississippi was, by the fall of Vicksburg, opened, and Gettysburg was gained on the same glorious fourth of July, the doom of the Confederacy was sealed.

GREAT NORTHERN POWER PLANT UNDER CONSTRUCTION

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Wentachee, Wash., April 5.—Actual construction work was started today on the Cheilan River power-plant, the central feature in the colossal plans of the Great Northern Railway to electrify its lines throughout this section of the Northwest. The project calls for the construction of a dam which is expected to be one of the engineering wonders of America. The cost of the entire power-plant will be close to $10,000,000. It will generate about 100,000 horsepower. This will be sufficient to electrify not only the up-river branch of the Great Northern, but all of its main lines east of the Cascades to Spokane.

RADICAL IMPROVEMENT IN PETERS BUILDING

THREE UPPER FLOORS WILL BE CONVERTED INTO FLATS AND APARTMENTS.

REMOVE FIFTH STORY

New Front Will be Constructed of Yellow Glazed Brick With Tile and Stone Adornments.

Radical improvements in the John W. Peters building, formerly known as the "American House," that will convert the first floor into modern retail quarters, the second and third floors into commodious and convenient flats, and the fourth floor into small apartments, are provided for in the plans for remodeling, drawn by Architect T. Gastro of Chicago. The fifth story is now being torn down and will be removed as it is considered too high up to make rentable quarters without elevator service.

An entire new front, original in its design, and bearing no resemblance to any other building in the city, is a part of the improvements begun. It will be constructed of yellow glazed brick, with green tile and Bedford stone ornamentation. There will be three bay windows on each floor above the first, one for each flat. They will not project out from the wall, but will be set into it, the outer edge being flush with the wall.

The ceiling of the first floor stores will be raised a foot to provide more light and air. Each of the three will be provided with a large plate glass window. The doors will be on the side and set back, and the jama and panels underneath the windows will be of copper. The floor will be laid in the vestibules and hallways five feet in width are to be placed behind the show-windows. And "I" beam and pillar will be made a part of the new partition wall between the two stores so that the two can be converted into one when desired. A "T" beam will also be placed across the rear, making a future extension in that direction feasible.

Stairways and interior walls will be moved so as to equalize space, and a new fire-wall extending from the basement to the roof will be put in between the saloon and the adjoining store. All stairways, balustrades, etc., will be new and larger, and have an easier gradient than those they replace.

Oak finish and maple floors will be used in all the flats of which there will be three on each floor. The apartments on the fourth floor will be similarly finished. Each flat will have a parlor, living room, kitchen, bathroom, two bed-rooms and closet. There will be three light and air shafts in the building, all of generous proportions. The dining rooms, and inside bed-rooms will have windows opening on the air shaft. Roomy front halls are provided for in the plans.

Six apartments, each consisting of a large living room, bed-room, hall, and bath are to occupy the fourth floor. They are designed to meet the needs of tenants who take their meals out or do light housekeeping. Mr. Peters who is himself a contractor, will have charge of the construction of the building, leaving supervision of the work to a competent foreman, when his business calls him elsewhere. The building is to be completed by early fall, and work is already under way.

DINNER STORIES

It was a bitter cold day, the snow was deep and the sidewalks frozen hard. A colored man, bundled up in a moth-eaten chinchilla coat, stood shivering against a building, trying to avoid the freezing blast.

Just then another dark, dressed in thin, threadbare clothes and with no overcoat, came out of a nearby barber shop and started up the street, whistling cheerily. Still whistling, he passed and glanced up at the darky in the big chinchilla coat. The latter took one withering look at the passerby and yelled:

"Say, nigrah, you can whistle as loud as you please, but you can't make me believe it ain't cold!"

A little stum child was enjoying his first glimpse of pastoral life.

The setting sun was gliding the meadows and roses of the old-fashioned garden, and on a little stool he sat beside the farmer's wife, who was plucking a chicken.

He watched the operation gravely for some time. Then he spoke:

"Do yer take off their clothes every night, lady?"

While passing an old-fashioned inn in Scotland some tourists were attracted by an aged bagpiper, who was tooting atrocious sounds through an instrument that was both dilapidated and squeaky.

"Great Jeeho, Sandy!" exclaimed one, in desperation. "Why don't you have your bagpipes repaired?"

The old man ceased playing and looked up in astonishment.

"Havers, mon, ye dinna understand! If ma bagpipes wor in good tune the inn mon wadna give me two shillings to move on!"

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, April 5, 1873.—A. Anderson is executing some difficult work at his shop on West Milwaukee street. It consists of two flat surfaces, representations of the circular disk four feet in diameter, and its use is to aid the blind pupils in acquiring a better knowledge of geography of the country that they can gain at the present time. The continental outlines, the elevations and depressions of the surface of the map are the country's principal rivers and lakes, the political divisions, the zones and the parallels and degrees of latitude are distinctly represented, and the slightest touch by a blind person will enable them to determine the exact location of the important points of the world. Hung in handsome black walnut case, placed upon rollers and casters, it is an attractive specimen of handicraft.

Mr. Anderson has made two of these and has received many orders.

We are unable to ascertain the name of the individual from the town of Milton, who surrounded the whiskey which caused his team to run away on the West Side this afternoon. At the corner of Jackson and Milwaukee street, Wm. Keating was knocked down and injured by the running team and his dray wrecked. Further down the street a lumber wagon parted company with one of the wheels missing the team was finally stopped after it had done considerable damage.

Prof. Cushman the great trotting horse driver and riddler, also lecturer on the horse, is stopping at the Williams house. The Professor intends visiting this city with his twenty-four best horses.

DAILY GAZETTE'S LUTHER BURBANK SUPPLEMENT

Filled with color illustrations made from direct color photograph prints showing Luther Burbank's wonderful new creations, and describing the methods of plant improvement which Luther Burbank has used and which he is now prepared to give to the world. The editorial matter and illustrations for this interesting Luther Burbank Supplement have been supplied us by The Luther Burbank Society which has been chartered by the State of California, for the purpose of giving the broadest possible dissemination to Luther Burbank's methods and discoveries. This Society, which numbers among its members some of the foremost men and women of America, has taken this means of arousing interest in newer and better methods of agriculture, horticulture and plant improvement, so that Luther Burbank's methods and discoveries, instead of being permitted to die with him, may be placed within the reach of the whole world to apply and profit. In this Supplement The Society will make its first announcement of the free distribution of color-illustrated bulletins or monographs, which it means to place in the hands of all who grow things from the soil, whether for pleasure or for profit. Among the features of this Supplement are:

Cobless Corn A description of Mr. Burbank's famous experiment with corn—taking it back ten thousand years in its history, when it grew in tassels instead of on cobs—together with the methods by which present day corn may be improved.

Cactus Fruit In an article illustrated with six natural color pictures, the story of Mr. Burbank's thornless fruit-bearing cactus is told; showing how this new fruit and forage plant looks when grown as a farm product or on its native desert.

New Strawberry Illustrated in natural colors, a specimen of a new Burbank strawberry is shown, together with a descriptive article on the methods of improvement and an outline of the ways in which the strawberry can still further be improved.

Burbank Potato Illustrated description of the Burbank potato, which it is said is now adding more than seventeen million dollars a year to the farm incomes of America alone—showing the large potatoes produced from two tiny parents.

Thornless Blackberry A special article describing the new Burbank thornless blackberry, showing how the energy formerly wasted in "tacks" can now be diverted into more and better fruit—with illustrations of methods employed.

Quick Walnut Tree An illustrated feature story telling how Luther Burbank has produced in twelve years' time a walnut tree such as Nature takes seventy years to produce, with color illustration showing the finished wood of the tree.

New Flowers An article illustrated with wonderful color reproductions of some of Luther Burbank's flower creations, together with the story of his famous Shasta Daisy, showing the beautiful flower which he produced from two little wild daisies.

Seedling Chestnuts Bearing full-size chestnuts when only six months old, and pineapple quince seedlings loaded with fruit when but two feet above the ground, furnish illustrations showing how Luther Burbank hastens some of Nature's processes.

Elbert Hubbard Contributes to this Supplement a masterpiece of English literature—his appreciation of Luther Burbank, the man. In addition, there are other articles and a photographic illustration of the Luther Burbank Homestead at Santa Rosa, Calif.

PRINTED IN NATURAL COLORS

All this wonderfully interesting material which has been furnished us by The Luther Burbank Society, has been printed in the form of a Supplement instead of being placed in the regular news columns, in order that the fruits, flowers and other creations may be illustrated in their natural colors. These supplements, printed on suitable book paper, will be a part of the regular issue, furnished to all readers without extra charge, and are not for sale separately from the remainder of the issue. They will be found well worthy of permanent preservation.

Thousands of Dollars Leave This Country Every Spring.

It's sent to every end of the earth for seeds for planting. And yet there is no where that better grains are raised than here.

And every spring there is hundreds of bushels of seed grain right here in this country that is never sold.

Why?

Because the city seed dealer advertises and the farmer does not.

Five Thousand Farmers Read The Gazette.

Many of you have seed for sale. The classified page daily has a column devoted to seeds. If you sell seeds use it; if you want to buy, read it. Both buyer and seller cannot fail to get results.

Side Lights On The Circus Business

By
D. W. WATT

(Copyrighted.) Many Janesville and Rock county people remember well two shows that visited Janesville at different times—one the W. E. Wallace Show and the other the Hagenbach. These two shows while not the largest on the road were recognized by the public as two of the finest that ever exhibited in Janesville. The Wallace show has been on the road for many years and the Hagenbach which was largely of trained animals which came over to this country about World's Fair year, a few years later was launched out as a circus and menagerie of the highest quality.

After being on the road a few years the Wallace and the Hagenbach shows were combined as one under the management of Mr. Wallace, and one of the Hagenbachs. Some years ago Mr. Wallace bought the Hagenbach show and for a number of years has been the owner and manager of both shows and had winter quarters at Peru, Ind., a short distance below the city on the banks of the Wabash river. These shows combined, made not only one of the largest but one of the finest shows ever put on the road and without any question their trained animals were the finest that this country had ever seen.

After Mr. Wallace took over the Hagenbach show he enlarged his winter quarters and up to the time the great floods struck them only a few days ago it was said to be one of the finest winter quarters owned by any show man in this country. But the floods came with such force that they soon surrounded the winter quarters and all the men could do was to loosen the elephants that were chained up and get them out of the buildings as fast as possible.

The men well knew that the elephants could swim to shore at any reasonable distance and this was the object in turning them loose, thinking they would naturally swim across to dry land. But they would go out into the swift current of the river and finding the river very cold they would turn back and try to get into their winter quarters, which had been their home for so many years. Of the twelve fine trained elephants eight of them perished in the cold water, the men being able to save only four of them.

They got a few of the trained animals onto shore but as for the most of them they were carried down the river to their deaths. While this will cripple the Wallace Shows it will only be for a time as he already has agents shipping animals into Peru, Ind., to take their places.

I had a letter from Mr. Wallace Wednesday morning, telling me of his loss and that his engagement in St. Louis where he was to open the 12th of this month had been cancelled as well as others, but that the show would open as good as new the 26th of April in Peru, Ind.

The money loss to Mr. Wallace will not cripple him as he is a wealthy man and has several acres of fine farm land near his home town, as well as a large interest in a bank in Peru and more or less business property in that city.

During Mr. Wallace's career in his hobby. He has always been able, at least for many years, to turn out the finest parade of its size that ever was put on the streets and with the combination of the Hagenbach trained animals of all kinds added to his already fine show made an exhibition of the first class and such as could only be seen with the Wallace Shows.

He said that his loss in the way of horses, elephants and cage animals, to say nothing of the loss to his winter quarters, would probably foot up to $150,000. He said one of the first relief cars to be received in Peru was sent from Chicago by the Showmen's League of America, an organization less than three weeks old. While this car was sent for the relief of the show people connected with the Wallace and Hagenbach Shows, very much of it went for the relief of other needy people. The car arrived there at two o'clock on Sunday afternoon and was all unloaded and distributed by dark.

A young man by the name of Will Hart, who was born and raised in Janesville, but who had been running the finest hotel in Peru for some years, was on hand and with the help of some others laid aside all red tape and saw that the needy ones were looked after as soon as the car arrived. And as Janesville sent a substantial check last Monday, Peru will long remember that Chicago and Janesville were among the first to send them relief. Mr. Wallace said the waters had gone down as fast as they came and already the work of cleaning up the city is well under way.

I want to tell you a little story which W. F. Cody ("Buffalo Bill") told at the banquet three weeks ago in Chicago. This is only one of many as they kept him telling stories for more than an hour and a half. This, he said, was his first experience at a social event of any kind. It happened along in the late sixties after he had been fighting Indians for some years on the frontier under the direction of General Phil Sheridan. He later became his warm personal friend. General Sheridan realized the good work that he had been doing and wrote him a letter saying that he might leave the front and come on to Chicago and he his guest for a few days.

He said: "I got what little money I could get together, bought me a suit of clothes, the best that I could in that part of the country and started for a visit to Chicago. Up to this time I never had been east of the Mississippi river. I arrived in Chicago and after a day or two of sight seeing around the city Gen. Sheridan and his wife told me that they were going to give a reception for me at a certain evening."

"The day before this reception was to come off Gen. Sheridan said to me: 'Cody, you will have to have a dress suit and a pair of white kid gloves.' I said to him: 'I can readily see that I should have some kind of a pair of gloves to cover up these rough hands of mine, but no dress suit for me.' But the general insisted that I must have a dress suit."

"About this time Mike Sheridan, a brother of the general's, who was living there said to me: 'Well, I will take a horse and buggy and we will go up town. I know where there's a man who rents dress suits.' I was in much better shape to rent a farm than to buy a good one to me. We were soon on our way up town. I bought a pair of gloves and rented a dress suit and the next evening after they got me all dressed up I felt as though I was in a plaster cast. In those days they wore the pants tight fitting and those that I had being a little too small for me. I was afraid to sit down for fear something would give way and every time I shook my hands with a guest I expected the gloves to rip."

"In those days there were no round dances and Mrs. Sheridan brought a lady friend of her's around and introduced her to me and said that we were to dance the first cotillion together. I managed to get through with it pretty well, for I have danced with the cowboys more or less in the west, but after it was over I commenced looking for Mike for he didn't seem to be among the guests and later I found him down in the basement of the house smoking a cigar."

I said to him: 'Mike, I cannot stand this torture any longer. I would rather fight Indians for forty-eight hours without a let-up on the frontier than to go back up stairs and dance one more cotillion.' Mike came to my rescue and said: 'I will slip up stairs the back way and get your clothes, bring them down and you can stay here with me till the party is over.' 'This I did, but of course I was called on the carpet in the morning, lost and homeless. After I had explained to them that it was impossible for me to go any farther they forgave me and this was my first experience in society in a dress suit. But as time went on and especially after I came back and started in show business it was not long before I caught the dress suit disease and from that time on it was an easy matter for me to go out in company and dress and feel like other people."

He told us many other stories that were interesting, at least to his old friends and I may think of something more along this line to tell you later.

Common Mistake.

Many a man who thinks he has outgrown his wife is the only one who thinks so.

ORFORDVILLE

Orfordville, April 5.—Miss Mildred Dunn, who has been spending some time with her sister, Mrs. C. E. Cochran of Janesville, has returned to her home.

The Misses Rosa Rime, Clara Trulson and Pearl Gaarder, were Janesville shoppers Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennett Thorn have taken possession of the Nels O. Brunsvold house.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Wiggins were the guests of their son, Arthur, in Janesville Thursday.

In the absence of her mother, Miss Ethel Compton is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Sainsbury.

Mrs. Harriet Cadman and Cyril Brice of Beloit, are guests at the home of Mrs. Bennett Thorn for a few days.

The Heggard warehouse closes today for the season. This finishes all the packing of this season's tobacco in this locality.

Miss Nina Larson spent Wednesday and Thursday in Oregon. Wis. Rev. Wm. and Mrs. Sainsbury entertained the four Weatheras brothers at dinner Sunday.

Master Burr Pankhurst spent a few hours in Janesville, the guest of Mrs. Claude Cochran.

The Women's Foreign Missionary society of the M. E. church, met at the home of Mrs. Rossiter last Wednesday. It was arranged at this time that Miss Bosworth of Beloit, should come to Orfordville on the twelfth of this month, Saturday, to organize a Standard Bearers' League. This is a society for young people under the jurisdiction of the W. F. M. S.

Mrs. Wm. Sainsbury has been on the sick list all the week.

Services will be conducted at the M. E. church next Sunday, both morning and evening. The text for the morning service will be "The Political Mood of God." In the evening the pastor will preach on "The Ingman Who Became a King." All are cordially invited.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LECTURER'S ADDRESS

VIRGIL O. STRICKLER SPEAKS AT LOCAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH
LAST EVENING.

QUESTION OF HEALING

And the Relation It Bears to Christianity Given Consideration—
Definition of God.

Virgil O. Strickler, C. S., member of the board of lectureship of the Mother church, First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, gave an address at the local Christian Science church last evening.

Important extracts from his address are given below: However much people may differ in their attitude towards Christian Science, every one will admit that it has done many good things. Entirely apart from the question of physical healing, it is generally conceded that it produces a happy and contented mentality, that it destroys fear, and makes people loving and kind.

When we add to this fact that it has healed many sick people who had previously been unable to find relief under other systems, that it has cured the drug habit, and of the liquor habit, has restored harmony in many homes, that it has given courage and has given hope to the discouraged, people who were discouraged, it is easy to understand why Christian Science has spread from one end of the earth to the other with such wonderful rapidity.

Christian Science Healing. The thing that has caused the most criticism of Christian Science is that it claims to heal the sick without drugs, by spiritual means only, through the medium of prayer, and as this is the phase of Christian Science in which the public seems to be most interested I shall take the liberty of discussing the subject with some particularity, and shall endeavor to answer the objections that have been presented to healing by prayer.

There are two classes of critics who attack Christian Science healing. First, those who say it is impossible, and therefore preposterous, for Christian Science to claim that the sick may be healed without drugs, through the medium of prayer, and second, those who claim that it is unscriptural to attempt to do so. All criticism of Christian Science healing falls under these two heads.

With respect to the first class, those who say it is impossible, it can only be answered that through Christian Science all kinds of diseases have been healed. This cannot be denied. The entire Christian Science movement is made up of people who have been healed. Most of them turned to Christian Science as a last resort, after having failed to get relief through other channels. Christian Science churches are a bank of money contributed as a thank offering to God by those who have been healed through Christian Science. The person in this day who doubts that Christian Science heals the sick is merely closing his eyes to what he does not wish to see. It is a fact that Christian Science does heal all manner of disease and suffering, and it is a fact for which every one should be grateful.

Charge of Unscriptural. With respect to the second class, those who think that it is unscriptural for Christian Science to teach that the sick may be healed without drugs, by spiritual means only, through the medium of prayer, I will say that it is difficult to understand how any person who has studied the Bible or believes in God, can be troubled by such a question. It seems obvious that people who pray to God for everything they desire might also be expected to pray to Him for deliverance from sickness as well as from sin.

Not once in all the record did he ever say to use drugs. Is it reasonable to suppose that he would have commanded his followers to heal the sick by spiritual means and without drugs unless he had known that it was possible to do so? Christian Scientists are striving to obey Jesus in his two-fold command to "preach the gospel and heal the sick," and in doing so they have met with such success that Christian Science is now recognized as an efficient curative system.

Primitive Christian Healing. It was a surprise to me, as it doubtless will be to some of you, to learn that the primitive church healed the sick and raised the dead. This fact was one of the things that first opened my thought to Christian Science and caused me to see that in healing the sick, the Christian Science church was not only obeying the commands of Jesus to go into all the world and preach the gospel and heal the sick, but was in fact re-establishing the healing work of the primitive church.

History records that the healing of the sick was a part of the regular church ministry for three hundred years after the crucifixion, and that the dead were raised during the first and second centuries. Afterwards the healing power was lost and history shows why. You will recall that the Emperor Constantine became a convert to Christianity in the third century. Tradition records that he was healed of an incurable disease by some member of the Christian church, and that out of gratitude for his healing he became an ardent Christian. He made the Christian religion the official religion of his empire with the result that the church became very popular. Multitudes of people united with it not because they understood its teachings, but merely because it was the proper thing to do. The officials and courtiers made haste to unite with the church and in time it became a semi-political institution and the spiritual ally departed from it.

Healing is the Sign. Although the public regards the healing as the most important part of Christian Science work, such is not the fact. The vital thing about Christian Science is that it teaches the truth about God and man, and about man's relationship to God. By realizing and understanding this truth, healing comes naturally, and is merely the sign that the truth is understood. When the knowledge of the truth comes to the human consciousness it destroys and corrects the false beliefs that have been entertained and the effects of the false beliefs disappear, just as the erasing of a wrong figure in the problem at the blackboard and the substitution of the right figure brings the correct result.

Healing is Natural. Christian Scientists, therefore, do not regard the healing of the sick by spiritual means as either mysterious or miraculous. A miracle is assumed to be something supernatural, done in opposition to law, whereas Christian Science shows that healing is the result of the operation of spiritual law, and that it is the natural and necessary result of the operation of spiritual law in the human consciousness.

The general opinion concerning the works of Jesus is that he had some mysterious power which enabled him to suspend the operation of the law, and that what he did was in defiance of law, hence as miraculous, and therefore beyond the range of human understanding.

Christian Science denies this, and insists that everything he did was in accordance with the laws of God, and that the same results must necessarily follow whenever and wherever man comes under the operation of those laws, since God's laws are unchanging.

What is Christian Science? Christian Science is a religion. It is the Science of Christianity—the science of God and man. It reveals spiritual law, and explains the operation of that law in its relation to man and the universe. It defines mortal mind and immortal Mind and so makes plain the difference between the mortal man and man made by God in His image and likeness.

Christian Science pleads for a rational understanding of God in place of mere belief about Him, and it is urging mankind to look for the real causation in Mind and not in matter. It declares that God is not the author of sin, sickness, or death, hence these conditions are illegitimate and can be destroyed by a knowledge of the truth. It denies that there is any divine authority for man to sin, suffer, or die, and recalls the solemn declaration of the Scripture that God gave man as his bright dominion over all the earth and over all that it contained. I shall give no offense when I say that the average person has a very uncertain and indefinite conception of God. If you were to ask ten people to tell you who and what God is, you would ten different answers. Some think that God is a person. For instance, in his great painting called "The Flight of the Holy Family," which hangs in the Metropolitan Art Gallery in New York City, Rubens painted what he conceived to be a good portrait of God. He depicted Him as a man with a long beard, and Awards will be based on one acre yield.

Contest open to any boy sixteen years of age and under.

Costs nothing to enter.

To be in personal charge of Noyes R. Raessler, Wisconsin's Champion Corn Grower.

Entries to Close May 5th.

The Gazette Believes There is a Lot of Undeveloped Talent Among the Boys of Rock County and that there are any number of them capable of winning championships if given the right sort of incentive and the correct instruction in corn growing. It has been Rock County's good fortune to have as one of its citizens a man who has studied corn growing and reduced it to a science—A man who has captured for three years big prizes and who finally has won fame for himself and his county by securing the championship of the Northern Zone. Noyes Raessler is that man and it is he whom the Gazette has secured to conduct its corn contest.

Wonderful Lessons in Corn Growing.

Mr. Raessler will instruct all boys entering the contest in the manner of preparing soil, fertilizing, planting and in fact every phase of the work from the seed to the harvest. His lessons or instructions will appear only in the Gazette and each contestant will do well to study them carefully and clip them out for future reference. He will tell you what he did to produce his championship corn and will show you how to do the same thing.

Better Methods in Farming and Seed.

That there is need for better methods in farming is conceded and that the modern ideas in seed culture are best has been fully demonstrated. With these two facts as a basis the Gazette believes that the boys should receive the encouragement which will give them a deeper interest in farm life a pride in their efforts and a reward for their careful work.

We are going to make Rock County The Banner Corn County of the State. Can it be done?—Yes, with your aid and with the example and instruction of Mr. Raessler, we will show the State that the stuff is in us which makes champions.

There Are No Strings to This Contest. You Get Just What You Work For.

The seed will be that which Mr. Raessler has used so successfully himself. Each boy will be supplied with enough Silver King or Golden Glow seed to plant an acre at cost, $1.00.

This is a special price made by Mr. Raessler to the Gazette and because of this contest he could sell every pound he has at double the price.

Those who wish to furnish their own seed are at liberty to do so; the opportunity is given to use the same seed Mr. Raessler has developed into such a high state of perfection. Boys furnishing their own seed of the two varieties indicated are not barred in any way from participating.

Rules of the Contest.

First: Fill out and send or bring to the Gazette office the entry blank printed below and secure your seed.

Second: Arrange for an acre of ground, selecting that which will be best suited to the purpose.

Third: The seed must be Silver King (Wisconsin No. 7) or Golden Glow (Wisconsin No. 12.)

Fourth: Corn must be grown entirely by the boy himself.

Fifth: The awards will be made on the yield of one acre and the 10 winners required to bring to Gazette Office the best ten ears of corn from the crop for exhibition purposes. The fairness of the contest will be largely in the hands of the boys. Mr. Raessler will make personal inspection trips and some further rules will be laid down for contestants to follow.

Sixth: The ground will be measured sometime before harvest time and the weighing of corn will be under the supervision of competent judges who will be chosen later.

Some of the Possibilities.

Corn grown by those participating will give a big yield and will bring fancy prices for seed especially that which captures the ten prizes.

The prize winners will have opportunity of exhibiting at shows and competing for honors.

Reputations for seed culture will be made which will be life long assets and will bring large income.

Knowledge about expert methods will be gained by every contestant. The opportunity to enter the race and receive Mr. Raessler's instruction will be worth many times the effort.

Address all communications to Corn Contest Editor Gazette.

Entry Blank Gazette's Corn Contest.

I desire to enter the Gazette Corn Contest and agree to follow instructions and abide by the rules and regulations of the contest.

I shall use my best efforts to produce prize corn and to make Rock County the champion corn county of the State. Herewith $1.00 for seed for one acre.

Case After Case

Plenty More Like This in Janesville.
Scores of Janesville people can tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills. Many a happy citizen makes a public statement of his experience. Here is a case of it. What better proof of merit can be had than such endorsement?

Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson, 118 Terrace St., Janesville, Wis., says: "I was a sufferer from kidney trouble for ten or twelve years. My kidneys became sluggish and their failure to do their work properly caused me to become weak and helpless. The kidney secretions were unnatural and often my joints were sore and swollen. I had almost given up hope of getting relief when I had the good fortune to hear of Doan's Kidney Pills. I got a supply at the People's Drug Co., and they soon restored my kidneys to a normal condition. I advise other kidney sufferers to try this remedy. I take pleasure in again recommending Doan's Kidney Pills and advising their use in all cases of kidney trouble. I am still free from kidney complaint and my back does not bother me to any extent."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McMillan Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

A Stirring Story of Military Adventure and of a Strange Wartime Wooing

Copyright, 1911, by G. P. Putnam's Sons.

The night of Oct. 18 was full of inquietude and alarms for the inmates of Belle Bosquet. A Federal guard was posted there, and Barker served as courier. Neither Jenny nor Madeline West would think now of going on to Winchester, with Kerchival West in a precarious condition and the fate of Captain Heartsease still uncertain. General Haverill did not return to the house, but joined General Buckthorn at the front, where, it was understood, General Wright was making every possible preparation pending the return of Sheridan, for guarding against and resisting an attack upon his right, which was the only point at which he apprehended immediate trouble.

Before daybreak on the morning of the 19th Madeline and Gertrude, who occupied a room together, were awakened by firing in the distance up the valley to the southward. Jenny Buckthorn, in an adjoining chamber, heard their voices and joined them for companionship and sympathy. Also, what a changed, subdued Jenny within the last twenty-four hours!

The girls dressed hurriedly in silence and came downstairs. Already Kerchival West, haggard and excited looking, was pacing the veranda like a caged animal. Barker had been down to the pike for reconnaissance and now came back with startling news.

"It's a battle, sure!" he said. "An' Sheridan away, the divil only knows where. Begob, they must have attacked by surprise before the screech of dawn, judgin' from!"

"Who has attacked? Who is surprised?" demanded Kerchival with furious impatience.

"The infantry has attacked us, sor, an' what's more, they seem to be drivin' things before 'em. By the direction of the fire it should be our left flank they have pounced upon instead of the right, where they were daintily expected. Sure, thim rebels have no politeness now!"

"Do you mean to say our troops are falling back?"

"Well, sor, I did hear some cavalry gallopin' down the pike, but whether it was ours or theirs or only Mosby's gorillas, that I can't tell yez."

"Then I'll go and find out for myself!" Kerchival cried fiercely, making a move into the hallway for his hat. The sudden exertion proved too much for him, and he sank into a chair, clutching with one hand at his breast.

"Hark! There is the firing again, worse than ever, and it is coming nearer," said Gertrude, unconscious of a certain exultation in her tone. "If General Longstreet only has—I mean, if really he—

"He can never drive General Sheridan back—of that I am certain," spoke up Madeline with unwonted spirit.

"Let us go—oh, pardon me, Gertrude—ladies—I beg," said Kerchival, starting up, then at once seating himself again.

But they all had risen, as impatient as he was, and hurried out. Kerchival and Gertrude took the path up the elevation to where the big cottonwood tree overlooked the valley. Jenny and Madeline lingered on the veranda.

"Go on, go on!" muttered Kerchival, instinctively feeling for his sword and looking loweringly in the direction from which came the roar of the guns. "Fight to a finish and have it over. Keep the battle to yourselves. I'm out of it."

"Kerchival," said Gertrude, "your sister Madeline says that now she must pray for the man she loves, enemy or no enemy."

"And she is right. Anything else would be worse than treason. I can't pray. Can you, Gertrude?"

"Yes. Ah, Kerchival!"

He leaned against the tree, his hand clutching at his breast again.

"Your wound! Let me call the surgeon, Kerchival."

"Wound! I have no wound to bother about now. You love me?"

"Look! There are soldiers running through the woods. Oh, what shall we do?"

The firing, very close now, was faster and more furious than ever. It seemed to have given Kerchival West new breath of life.

"Never mind that," he cried deliriously. "It's only a battle! Say that you love me!"

"Be quiet, Kerchival, dear. I do love you. I said so last night before every one, only you didn't hear me. I said the same thing at Charleston when first we met. And some one I told wrote it in a letter—that letter which General Buckthorn gave you and told you not to read unless I became unruly. I am not unruly, am I, dear?"

"No, my precious girl! Nothing can separate us now. That letter—he searched in his pockets, but could not find it. 'Ah, I remember! They must have taken it when I was laid out by Thornton's dagger. And a miniature I had—that's gone too!'"

Josephus Orange blossomed on a mule without saddle dashed up from the direction of the pike, shouting:

"Miss Gertrude, Marse Bob he done get a yard around dis house, but 'tain't no use now, for de Yanks is runnin' away. We's got 'em licked, missy; we sho' has!"

"Begob, the naysur's right," confirmed Sergeant Barker. "The grab-bag divils have sprung up out of the ground. They're pourin' over our left flank like Noah's own flood. Our camp is wiped out, an' they've got our guns an' wagons an' wounded an' prisoners, an' the whole Union army is a-starlin' to beat it down the pike for Winchester, worse luck! Colonel West, yonder is your own regiment in full retreat!"

"My regiment!" roared Kerchival, jumping up. "Great God, no! Get my horse, Barker! I'll stop that or—"

"Yer horse, is it? Hooroo! I'm wid ye, colonel! There's a rovin' at Finnegan's ball, an' we're goin' to be in it!"

"Kerchival," pleaded Gertrude, throwing her arms around him, "you must not go! You may be dying!"

"Dying nothing! I'm all right now, Gertrude, my life! My regiment won't retreat any further unless it retreats over my dead body!"

"Here's yer horse, colonel! Now give me that mule, ye black contraband naysur!" called Barker, wild with joy, to the rolling-eyed Josephus.

"Goodby, Gertrude, darling! Tell Madeline! Pray for us!"

And two flying figures buried themselves down the hillside into the roaring maelstrom of battle that filled the valley.

erals Buckthorn and Haverill with General Wright Colonel West's regiment had been ordered to the front.

"Ah, Haverill," said General Buckthorn as that officer came out on the veranda, "maybe Sheridan is right, after all. The reconnoissances this morning show no hostile force on our right, and Crook reports that Early is retreating up the valley. But General Wright is making some changes in our line this afternoon, and in the meantime I want to warn you to order General McCuen to go into camp on the right of Meadow brook, with the Second division. Jenny, girl, don't bother me about Heartsease now. Order the Third brigade of cavalry, under Colonel Towell, to occupy the left of the pike. We'd better hold Custer on the second line, at Old Forge road, until further instructions. That is all for the present. Goodby, Jenny, my darling. General, I bid you good day."

General Haverill, who had carefully written the foregoing orders in his notebook, watched General Buckthorn off, then asked Jenny as she re-entered the house if she would send Gertrude to him.

"Gertrude, my child," he said with unwonted gravity, "the surgeons tell me that Kerchival West will get on well enough if he remains quiet; otherwise not."

"That is what is worrying me, general," Gertrude replied. "Colonel West insists upon preparing to join his regiment at the front. I hope you will order him to remain here—compel him to be prudent."

"He should not look for the honor of death on the field under present circumstances," muttered the general, with peculiar significance.

"What do you mean, sir?" inquired Gertrude uneasily.

"You have a right to ask me that as your father's old friend, once your own guardian. Gertrude, child, you have a warm, true heart. I could not bear to see your happiness destroyed through very loyalty to your heart's affection. Listen. Last night I saw you kneeling beside Kerchival West, speaking to him, ministering to him with all the tender passion of a southern woman. You told him that you loved him. But those fateful words fell upon unconscious ears. Tell me, has he ever heard those words from your own lips? Have you ever confessed your love to him before?"

"Never—since you ask me. But why, General Haverill, do you ask?"

"Never mind. Only do not repeat it. Keep your heart to yourself, my girl."

"But, general, at a moment like this, when his life—"

"Leave that to me—hush!"

The voice of Colonel West himself, heard outside, giving orders to a sergeant to get his horse ready, silenced them. He then came up in full uniform and wearing his sword and saluted. His face was pale, but he presented a brave front.

"Are there any orders, general, for my regiment?" he asked, "beyond those given to Major Williams in my absence this morning? I am going to the front to resume my command."

"It is my wish, colonel, that you remain here under the surgeon's care," said the general quietly.

"Oh, my wound is a mere trifle. I could not rest here. I must be with my men at this perhaps critical moment in the campaign."

"I have told you my wish is to the contrary," repeated General Haverill. Kerchival knew only too well that ominous, quiet reserve. He knew the inflexibility of that proud, intolerant mood. He could not wholly fathom its cause, but a troublesome recollection suddenly occurred to him.

"General," he said, with grieving earnestness, after looking around to see that Gertrude had silently withdrawn, "I was unable to keep my appointment with you last night for an unforeseen reason, which you know. I am ready and willing to explain certain matters, as you requested me to do yesterday. But meanwhile a crisis has developed, and whatever there may be between us personally you are now in the position of interfering with my duty and my privilege as a soldier. It is my right to be at the head of my regiment so long as I am physically able."

"You have my positive order, sir!"

"Then I protest!"

"You are under arrest, sir!" said the general without changing his tone.

Kerchival started as if he had been shot. Then in a deliberate, dazed way he unclasped his belt and offered his sword.

"No, keep your sword. I have no desire to humiliate you," the general continued in a low voice. "But you will hold yourself subject to further orders from me."

With these inexorable words he turned away, while Kerchival, as if suddenly a sick man again, started to re-enter the house. He met Gertrude at the door, all gentleness and commiseration.

"Did you hear what the general said?" he asked feebly.

"No matter what he said or what anyone says now, Kerchival," was her impulsive response. "You have my perfect faith—there! Now you must go to your room and rest until the surgeon comes again."

He obeyed in silence. What words could he find?

Looking out from her window a few minutes later, Gertrude was startled to see a number of men emerging from the woods by the path leading up from the ford. Then she perceived that they were Confederate soldiers under a flag of truce, following an escort of Union troops and carrying some burden.

It proved to be a stretcher, on which lay the unconscious form of a young man, evidently a wounded Federal officer. A surgeon walked beside the stretcher, giving directions to the bearers, who rested a short distance from the veranda steps. Gertrude ran to the door, followed by Madeline West and Jenny Buckthorn. Sergeant Barker also stood, wonder struck, on a sort of improvised sentry guard.

The Daily Novellee
SO NEAR AND YET
She was in a violet hobble skirt and a dreadful predicament.

Although most hobbles fit tight, this hobble was TIGHT.

Facing her was a hard-visaged woman, none other than Madame Lalala, the milliner who had made hats for all the crowned heads of Europe except the men's.

"I must have a $50 deposit immediately," Madame was saying, as our story opens, "for the hat goes to Mrs. Van Flubblity."

The inhabitant of that violet hobble would not have lost the hat for all the money in the world.

"I—I have but a two hundred and seventy-five dollar bill!" she wailed. "I can change it."

But the hobble fitted TIGHT! She was in a violet hobble skirt and a dreadful predicament.
